Lewis Hurls Third Party Challenge At Democrats

C. I. O. Head to Call Conclave if Nominee Or Platform Is Found Unfavorable to Labor

By the Associated Press

Monongah, W. Va., April 1.—John L. Lewis today sounded a threat to organize labor, youth, old age, colored and farmers' groups into a third party unless Democrats adopt a platform and select a candidate "acceptable to labor and the common people."

The outspoken president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations brusquely commented that "I don't expect anything of the Republicans" and charged the present Administration "is curtailing the meager relief heretofore extended" to the unemployed.

The leader of the United Mine Workers of America did not specifically mention a third party, but said unless the conditions he laid down were met by Democrats at their convention, he would call a convention of his own, presumably before the fall elections.

Condition "Damnable"

Striking at those he said "secretly hope that America may be drawn into the European war" and thus find the answer to the "economic and political questions that beset the land," Lewis declared that such persons were "in for a fool's awakening."

He disclosed plans for a strong alliance between American Youth Congress and the Labor's Non-Partisan League, which Lewis organized, already have been "worked out and ratified."

Declaring that in some Southern States, "only 26 per cent of our population votes" and that 8,000,000 Negro voters were disfranchised in eight Southern States "because they do not have enough money to pay their poll tax," Lewis called the poll tax "iniquitious" and said such a condition was "damnable."

The bushy-haired labor leader announced plans to speak at a forthcoming meeting of the Townsend old-age pension organization and to address conventions of the American Negro Congress and the American Society for the Advancement of Colored People.

Attacks Relief Curtailment

Lewis said that unless the Democratic Party "nominates a candidate for President or adopts a platform satisfactory to labor and the common people" he would call a convention of "various groups to formulate a program that each and every American can support."

Asked after his address if he meant he intended to form a third party, Lewis parried all questions. Pressed for an answer, he said:

"We'll reserve that for later."

The United Mine Workers president came to this northern West Virginia community, rich in bituminous coal, to speak at the annual miners' meeting celebrating the winning of the eight-hour day and the seven-hour day.

Once one of President Roosevelt's strongest supporters, Lewis declared that the research department of the C. I. O. now had placed the Nation's unemployment total at 11,934,000 persons, and roared:

"Not a single, solitary suggestion is being made in America on how to provide Americans with work.

"Far from settling the unemployment question, the existing Administration is curtailing the meager relief heretofore extended to men and women out of work."

Speaking scornfully of "national police institutes conducted by the

Farley Commends Roosevelt and Hull In Tennessee Talk

By the Associated Press

Columbia, Tenn., April 1.—Postmaster General James A. Farley, speaking today in Cordell Hull's native State, termed the Secretary of State "another great son of Tennessee" and also lauded President Roosevelt for his "desperate battle to improve social conditions."

Farley spoke at the dedication of a new postoffice here, in celebration of annual Mule Day.

Recalling Columbia as the ancestral home of President James K. Polk, the Democratic National Committee chairman told the massed throng: "I count it among the privileges of my life to have served in the Cabinet with another great son of Tennessee—Cordell Hull."

"His character, his integrity, his humility and his marked unselfishness have brought him to a foremost position among all men," Farley said. "He is truly a man that all Tennessee, all America, and indeed all people in the world who believe in fair dealing, justice, human right, religious and racial freedom and peace among men, sincerely and fully appreciate."

Last night, in an interview, the Postmaster General, after similarly praising Hull, answered a question of whether he would run as Vice President on a ticket naming Hull for President by saying, "you can

Michigan Senator Calls for Support Of Jeffersonians

By Robert C. Albright

Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, last night bid for the support of Jeffersonian Democrats in a radio broadcast to more than 100 Nebraska Republican rallies as the Nation awaited Wisconsin's primary verdict on leading campaign issues.

New York, like Wisconsin, today will select delegate-slates to the Democratic and Republican national conventions.

Vandenberg, in a "middle-of-the road" address, declared "millions of independent voters and . . . millions of consistent Jeffersonian Democrats" would join the Republicans if they provided a common front on which "like-thinkers" can unite.

The Michigan Senator pointed his remarks toward the Nebraska primaries a week away even as he faced New York District Attorney Dewey today in Wisconsin's Republican contest for pledged delegates.

Wisconsin Democrats meanwhile will afford the first significant test of the third term issue and Vice President Garner's challenge of it.

With Wisconsin Progressive voters holding the balance of power in both Republican and Democratic contests, the State will choose:

Between two full slates of Roosevelt - pledged delegates, threatening to split the third-term vote, and a third Democratic slate pledged to the Vice President.

Between Republican delegates entered for Dewey and Vandenberg and a third uninstructed Republican slate.

A defense of the entry of Roosevelt-pledged slates in Wisconsin and other States meanwhile came from Charles Michelson, publicity director of the Democratic National Committee.

Michelson, in his weekly column, "Dispelling the Fog," said that when States entered the name of the President alone or in competition with

Byrd Finds New, Snowless Land

Punta Arenas, Chile, April 1.—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd said upon arriving at this extreme southern Chilean port today that his expedition had discovered lands not charted on existing maps.

Bare earth and mountains without snow, Byrd said, were sighted during five flights over Antarctic regions.

Byrd arrived here on the Bear, after weathering a heavy storm.

Rep. Bolles Urges Inquiry on Inspections; 5 Hurt in O St. Blaze

Congressional investigation "to find out what's wrong with the law" which allowed building inspectors to pass the apartment house at 2131 O street northwest, swept by flames yesterday at a cost of three lives, was urged before the House District Committee yesterday by Representative Stephen Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin.

Nearly 60 homeless persons, meanwhile, sought shelter with friends last night or wandered hopelessly through the gutted rooms of the three-story dwelling. In addition to those fatally hurt, five others were injured.

The dead:

Mrs. Dorothy Haislip, 30, a telephone operator at the Interstate Commerce Commission, of burns.

Michael H. Jones, 50, who died in Emergency Hospital of injuries received when he leaped with his wife from the third floor of the burning building.

Miss Carrie Dunahue, 52, of burns.

Roosevelt Better, Takes Auto Ride To See Spring Buds

President Roosevelt, confined to his study for some time by illness, yesterday personally inspected the first buds of spring in an automobile ride. Accompanied only by Thomas Qualters, his bodyguard, he drove through Potomac Park, Georgetown, out Conduit road, across Chain Bridge and along the Potomac almost to Great Falls before returning to the White House shortly after 3 p. m.

The White House revealed yesterday that the illness which has bothered the President for three weeks is intestinal influenza and said that he would defer a trip to Warm Springs, Ga., at least until April 13.

Aides previously had said that Mr. Roosevelt had a cold, and the President himself had described his illness facetiously as "swamp fever."

Stephen Early, a Presidential secretary, said the Chief Executive's temperature had been normal several days, but that the "flu" still was slightly in evidence in an occasional gaseous condition.

He said Mr. Roosevelt would go to his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., next week-end.

Tobey Asks Repeal Of 60-Day Penalty For Refusing Reply

A Senator and the census director continued a tactical feud yesterday as an army of 130,000 prepared to move into the field this morning in history's greatest fact-finding campaign.

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, and census officials struck at each other indirectly, and apparently abandoned frontal attacks as the deadline neared.

Tobey introduced in the Senate a bill to repeal the possible 60-day jail penalty for persons refusing to answer the census questions. He had fought against inquiries about wage and salary income up to $5,000 per person, holding that answers might be misused for political purposes. He took this step when census day arrived without Senate action on his resolution, already approved by the Senate Commerce Committee, asking withdrawal of the income question.

William L. Austin, census director, who said he could not recall after a lifetime that anyone had been jailed for refusing to talk to enumerators, made a quick flank attack against Tobey. He announced that Francis P. Murphy, Republican Governor of Tobey's State, had

City in Terror As Radio Heralds End of World

Philadelphia, April 1 (AP).—An announcement that "the world will end at 3 p. m., E. S. T., Monday, April 1," released by the publicity director of the Franklin Institute and broadcast over a local radio station (KYW) sent thousands of frightened Philadelphians hurrying to their telephones for additional details last night.

Newspapers, police stations and the city's information bureau were deluged with calls. The information bureau estimated it handled 4,000 calls itself.

The announcement, read after a radio program which featured the name of Orson Welles, of Martian invasion fame, and a discussion of the possible end of the world, said:

"Your worst fears that the world will end are confirmed by astronomers of the Franklin Institute.

"Scientists predict that the world will end at 3 p. m. E. S. T. tomorrow.

"This is no April Fool joke. Confirmation can be obtained from Wagner Schlesinger, director of the Fels Planetarium, of this city."

Senate Group Kills Savings; $123,000,000 Asked for FSA

Subcommittee Restores Funds For Canal, Rivers

By John G. Norris

Funds for starting a new set of bomb-proof Panama Canal locks and 17 new flood control projects were voted yesterday by a Senate appropriations subcommittee, which thereby practically wiped out the last of the one-time $300,000,000 budget savings achieved by Congressional economy forces.

Chairman Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said the group had voted almost unanimously to restore $14,150,000, which the House had cut from budget estimates, for beginning work on the spare Panama locks, and had added $30,000,000 to the $70,000,000 the House and the budget had allowed for flood control.

At the same time, President Roosevelt was revealed as backing Senate restoration of the $112,000,000 cut from the 1941 naval supply bill in the House.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said the President had told him he favored voting the full budget estimates of $1,077,000,000 for the Navy, including the $3,000,000 proposed for developing Guam for use of Navy patrol planes.

The action of the Thomas subcommittee brings the net reduction made in President Roosevelt's budget to $13,000,000. A Senate increase of about $200,000,000 over budget recommendations for the farmers wiped out the larger part of the $300,000,000 saving previously made, and by last week-end the net cut had been lowered to $57,000,000.

Still facing the lawmakers is President Roosevelt's warning that $460,000,000 in additional taxes must be voted to finance the emergency national defense outlays or the $45,000,000,000 legal limit on the public debt must be raised.

Instead of taking either alternative, most members of Congress united behind economy advocates, who pointed to a third-way out—cut the President's budget by the $460,-

Wallace Request Is $40,000,000 Under 1940 Figures

While a drive for greater WPA funds took on new impetus in the House, Secretary Wallace yesterday presented a budget request for the Farm Security Administration almost $40,000,000 below the grant for the current year.

In an effort to stem the tide of migrant workers flowing westward from the dustbowl—and from Maryland and Virginia as well—the FSA asked a House appropriations subcommittee for $70,000,000 in "rehabilitation loans" out of a total estimate of $123,000,000. The rehabilitation loans are intended for destitute farm families who are among the Nation's "potential migrants," it was explained.

The WPA request for 1941 will be presented to the same subcommittee this week by WPA Administrator F. C. Harrington. The President indicated in January he would ask $1,000,000,000 for WPA for next year, compared with $1,477,000,000 this year, but in recent weeks there has been strong indication of a determined House drive to get more WPA funds. This movement has not been dampened by House action last week in granting an unbudgeted $67,450,000 to the CCC and NYA.

To forestall a cut in WPA rolls below the 2,100,000 average established for April, Representative

Evacuees Vote For Flood Control

Williamsport, Pa., April 1 (U.P.).—This city of 45,000, with more than 200 of its homes evacuated because of the raging Susquehanna River, today voted 20 to 1 in support of a bond issue for flood control.

The campaign was climaxed as rising waters forced nearly 1,000 persons to leave their homes. The vote was 10,592 in favor of a $175,000 bond issue and 550 against.

Crime Does Not Work

Bandit in Cab, Driver Breaks All Rules, but Misses Police Eye

Vain efforts of a cab driver to attract police attention by violating every available traffic law ended last night in a blaze of gunfire in front of the Annapolis Hotel and capture of a colored bandit by two detectives off duty.

It started when Edwin Barbee, of 2701 Fourteenth street northwest, picked up a colored passenger at Fourteenth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest. Becoming suspicious of the men, Barbee drove through red lights, violated other laws. Police took no notice.

When Barbee felt a gun thrust into his neck, he crashed into an automobile parked in front of the Annapolis Hotel and leaped out. The colored man fired one shot at the cab driver and fled, with Barbee in pursuit.

A block away, Detective Sergt. Tom Sweeney and Detective R. E. Williams, of Second Precinct, were on their way home. Hearing the shot, they turned about, spied the bandit fleeing with Barbee in pursuit and gave chase. The bandit, 22, was captured and his gun recovered.

Accused of Slaying Mother, Son Is Held in Gallinger

By Scott Hart

Jerome Howard, 25, on whom a coroner's jury after 33 minutes' deliberation yesterday fixed responsibility for the knife slaying of his mother, Mrs. Bessie Catherine Howard, 66, was in Gallinger Hospital last night, his face a mask of deadness, sorrow and bewilderment.

Taken from the inquest at the District Morgue to the jail, Howard was examined by the jail physician, Dr. W. K. Angevine, and on his recommendation removed to Gallinger for observation. He is held on a coroner's warrant charging homicide.

Dr. Angevine said he made no diagnosis yesterday.

16,000 Flee Susquehanna Flood; 6 Die In Torrent

Gas Tanks on River Explode; Red Cross Rushes Aid; Squads Fix Broken Dikes

By the Associated Press

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 1.—Sleepless riverfront towns over a 100-mile stretch suspiciously watched the rain-gorged Susquehanna tonight as it stood stationary here nine feet above flood level after driving an estimated 16,000 from their homes and taking six lives.

Expressing a hope the Wilkes-Barre crest had been reached, Weather Bureau spokesmen warned, however, that in the catastrophic flood of 1936 the unpredictable river began to fall, only later to move up an additional five feet. Tonight it stood only 1.4 feet below the 1936 crest and it was raining to the north near the New York State line.

Downstream at Sunbury, at the confluence of the Susquehanna's North and West branches, a steady rise was reported, and nearly half the population was evacuated.

Gas Tanks Explode

Floating fire on the surface of the stream added to the hazards of high water in one section as a 500,000-gallon gasoline tank broke loose, collided with another, and both exploded.

Within ten minutes two more tanks blew up with a boom heard for miles in the valley. Sheets of flame billowing from the stream spread terror for a short time.

The fire was extinguished without loss of life or serious damage other than to the oil plant.

Refugees by the thousands, many of them removed from flooded homes by Coast Guard boats from New Jersey, were given food and beds in sorts, in churches, schools and other large buildings as the Red Cross and other relief agencies set their organizations into full swing.

Bolster Broken Dikes

Emergency crews continued to pile sand bags on broken flood dikes both here and at Sunbury.

In the early evening it was unofficially estimated that 8,000 persons had fled from Sunbury's lower districts to The Hill, the highest part of the city. Sunbury has a population of 17,000.

With water already covering much of its business section, Sunbury prepared for any eventuality. Merchants moved their stock, in trucks and boats, to higher ground, but the deepening water later "drowned" the trucks' motors.

Eighty-five officers and men of the Sunbury National Guard unit were mobilized for patrol duty to augment Pennsylvania State police and other authorities. Guards also were placed at strategic points in Wilkes-Barre and other communities.

Homes Without Heat

Across from Wilkes-Barre, a dike broke late in the day, spilling muddy, roiling water into the borough of Kingston and driving out a fourth of its 21,500 population. Most homes there were without heat, without lights.

Shortly before midnight the Susquehanna at Wilkes-Barre had remained stationary at 31.6 feet for eight hours. The crest here four years ago was 33 feet.

Throughout Pennsylvania's anthracite region lowland schools were closed, hundreds of homes and business buildings emptied, highways blocked and streets and cellars inundated.

Coast Guardsmen in boats shipped here by rail toiled to evacuate families from endangered homes. The WPA authorized expenditure of $100,000 for emergency aid, and more than 1,500 project workers built dikes, reinforced levees with sandbags and constructed temporary roads and bridges.

Red Cross workers said that 400 cots and 500 blankets were being

CABINET MEETS IN SECRET—I

When all are present, 15 attend the enlarged Cabinet meetings at the White House: the President, Jack Garner, the heads of the 10 departments and Jesse Jones, McNutt and Carmody of the three great agencies — FLA, FSA and FWA. What they say and do in the Cabinet room is for no other ears. No record is kept.

Harlan Miller

* * * *

But there lurks a sly suspicion at the White House that some of them keep copious notes, diaries or journals about Cabinet proceedings—written either by their own hands or dictated to confidential secretaries immediately after each session, while memory is still fresh.

* * * *

No one else ever crashes Cabinet meeting; there are no interruptions by White House secretaries, no Le Hand or Kannee to take it down in shorthand, no phone calls, no notes passed in. Conceivably, if peace were sudden!, declared on a Friday afternoon, between 2 and 4, Steve Early might knock on the door. But such an interruption is far-fetched.

* * * *

The cars roll up 10 or 15 minutes early to the paved esplanade outside the White House offices. Hull and Morgenthau stroll across the narrow streets from west and east. The Press fires a shot or two across their bows as they cross the foyer, usually in vain. In the austere Cabinet room they exchange pleasantries, chaff, badinage until the President enters precisely at 2 o'clock.

"—do some keep diaries?"

They rise to greet him. His greetings to them are informal, friendly, sometimes even facetious; but the atmosphere is never frivolous. Rather, it is pregnant with solemnity. This is the Republic's board of directors, and even United States Steel Corporation wouldn't take itself more seriously.

* * * *

As soon as he is seated the President begins the Cabinet meeting by passing out his "chits," brief notes or memos, many of them in his own handwriting, which he has scribbled since the previous meeting.

Some of these consist of one or two words; some consist of a question or a sentence or two.

* * * *

Sometimes he has quit a stack of these, scribbled on one of the half dozen memo pads of various sizes that always lie on his desk. As these are passed down the table he begins to discuss who is uppermost in his mind, consulting the memoranda in front of him.

* * * *

When the President has finished bringing up the matters he wants to discuss the Cabinet members and agency chiefs are then free to offer for discussion the things they have on their minds.

They usually have brief cases, portfolios, large manila envelopes or notes.

"—sometimes they speak plainly"

As the ranking member of the Cabinet, Cordell Hull's turn comes first. The Secretary of State rarely brings up any matter before the Cabinet.

He has probably been in touch with the White House between meetings, as problems arose.

But the President often asks Hull leading questions, which develop animated general discussions; several members have opinions, as problems impinge on their fields.

* * * *

Often the President asks Jack Garner how things are on the Hill. The Vice President tells him, forcefully and at some length, squirming in his seat and talking rather emphatically.

Garner participates in Cabinet discussions more than any other Vice President ever has.

* * * *

They have been meeting so long together—half of them for seven years—that there is considerable plain speaking, despite the formality and constraint among 15 men who feel they are the board of directors for 130,000,000 people.

Occasionally the President points his chin at some Cabinet official with whom he has disagreed emphatically, and figuratively shakes a chiding finger at him. And as often as not the official defends his own course.

Oddly enough, Secretary Ickes is perhaps the most silent man at many Cabinet meetings.

Independent FCA Urged On Committee

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

Independence for the Farm Credit Administration became the battle cry in a Senate committee room yesterday as hearings began on the Gillette bill to separate the FCA from the Department of Agriculture.

Addressing a subcommittee that gave every appearance of hostility toward the bill, witnesses urged passage of the measure to take the FCA out of the reach of "departmental politics."

The bill, sponsored by five Democratic Senators, would establish the FCA as an independent board and thereby reverse President Roosevelt's order last year placing the agency under the Agriculture Department.

"To vest supervision of farmers' credit agencies in any political department means that they will be immediately weakened and ultimately destroyed," the subcommittee was told by John D. Miller, elderly president of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives.

Emphasizing his "growing fear of centralization of authority in Washington," L. J. Taber, master of the National Grange, declared that "agriculture is especially concerned in an independent loan agency, free from political pressure on the one hand and official pressure on the other."

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, who introduced the measure, asserted that the proposal was not intended as a reflection on either President Roosevelt or Secretary Wallace. In fact, he pointed out, the Secretary would be an ex-officio member of the six-man board set up under terms of the bill.

Fight Over Jones Bills

The FCA, "trustee for a private fund," should be administered on an entirely separate basis from Federal emergency loan agencies, Gillette insisted. He pointed out that last year every division of the Farm Credit Administration showed a "substantial profit," while the Federal relief-loan agencies all showed a loss.

The fight for restoration of independence to the FCA is linked to the current dispute over the Jones bill liberalizing FCA mortgage foreclosure restrictions, it was noted yesterday. A leading advocate of the Jones bill, which is now under consideration in a House committee, is Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, one of the prominent opponents of the Gillette bill.

Bankhead, member of the subcommittee handling the Gillette proposal, commented yesterday that it would not receive "substantial committee support" unless its friends "make out a better case than they did today." Chairman Byrnes, of the sub-committee, likewise indicated his opposition.

Farmers United, Taber Says

In defending the Gillette bill, Taber declared that the American farmer believes that "finance and politics will not mix," that "farm credit must be independent of production control and of Federal administrative policies," and that "relief and social problems must be kept unentangled from sound credit methods."

"I have never found the farmers of the United States as thoroughly united on any one principle as they are in the advocacy of this bill," Taber asserted, adding that he spoke for 800,000 members of the grange.

Taber said that "more than a million farmers have contributed more than $130,000,000 of their own money to help make the system function." The greatest advantage of the independent system, he declared, has been its cooperative aspect, "the sense of participation and ownership of the farm borrower himself."

The responsibility and control of farm cooperative groups is being "destroyed," Taber insisted, by the "tendency" toward centralization of power in the Government.

The proposed "liberalization" of FCA lending policies "means the destruction and overthrow of a system that farmers for years have sought to establish and which in the distant future they hope to own," Miller told the committee.

In a sharp exchange shortly before the hearing recessed until today, Senator Byrnes questioned Taber's claim to be a farmer.

"I challenge you to a milking race tonight," snapped Taber. With the observation that he didn't "pretend" to be a farmer, Senator Byrnes declined.

other Democratic tickets they were "merely exercising a regular and ordinary function—and there is involved no obligation on the favored one to run or not to run; that is his privilege."

Michelson said he hadn't "the remotest idea whether the President is seriously considering running or not" and so far as he knew "has told nobody that he will or will not accept the nomination." He said he knows of "no time limit on when he makes his decision."

Michelson said those who have criticized entry of Roosevelt slates without the President saying he was a candidate forgot that "the primary is a party's only method of expression; the sole way of declaring its adherence to any particular form of democracy, for example."

Senator Vandenberg, who has declined to speak in either Wisconsin or Nebraska because of Senate duties, reached approximately 100,000 Nebraska voters last night by radio in "cornhusker Republican" rallies in all but three of the State's counties.

Caravan Completed

Kenneth Wherry, Nebraska Republican State chairman, who came here to introduce Vandenberg as part of the program, said the rallies marked conclusion of a caravan that has traversed the State in behalf of all G. O. P. national and local candidates. He presented Vandenberg as "one of the outstanding Republican leaders of all time," but declared the State organization was "impartial" as between Republican candidates.

Addressing his appeal primarily to the farm vote, Vandenberg proposed that Republicans wage a campaign attractive to all like-thinking voters, regardless of prior party affiliation.

And he concluded on the keynote: "Our call is to the high middle ground of realistic common sense, where liberalism and conservatism shall strike a happy balance for the common good."

He renewed his plea for "a one-term President" who would be free of all incentives but "the one and single task of saving America."

For the farmer, Vandenberg urged parity not by subsidy but through the old McNary-Haugen "two price" system. He opposed the reciprocal trade agreements act as hostile to the welfare of the farmer.

He declared that it would be "silly to deny" that some good things have come from the New Deal and that these "must be saved and bettered." But he said that "the bad things are so bad and so dangerous in their cumulative threat to our economic system and to the very character of America itself, that four more years of the New Deal would be a collosal fatality."

With Wisconsin polling stations preparing to open for today's crucial primaries, Senator La Follette, who has declined to signal his Progressive following which way to vote, indicated he would continue aloof.

But his Republican colleague from Wisconsin, Senator Wiley, declared that if the third term slates swept the primaries it would be only with Progressive Party support.

"If the New Deal and the Progressive Party are synonymous in Wisconsin, it is time the voters be informed," declared Wiley.

Others predicted that Wisconsin's Progressive voters would divide today between Democratic and Republican primaries, weakening the draft Roosevelt vote which is already split between two tickets.

There seemed no doubt that the combination Roosevelt slate would roll up heavy popular pluralities for the President, but Garner supporters forecast that the Texan would pick up enough delegates in the two-ticket scramble to slow the draft movement which the Vice President is contesting in four other States.

Others Affected

Draft movement supporters, on the other hand, declared today's Wisconsin vote would be followed by a third term landslide for the President in the Illinois primaries next Tuesday that will smashingly strike at Garner's prestige.

Although Vandenberg and Dewey are the only two Republicans entered in today's Wisconsin delegate primaries, other G. O. P. aspirants will be affected by the results. Any sizable vote for an uninstructed delegate slate would probably be interpreted as a surprise victory for Senator Taft, (Republican), of Ohio, who kept out of the primaries.

A sweeping victory for Dewey, placing the New Yorker out front, would hurt the candidacy of Taft as well as Vandenberg.

But as the Roosevelt ticket must pile up a heavy majority to give the draft movement impetus, so Dewey must win in Wisconsin to keep his bandwagon going, most observers point out.

Gov. Olson Wins

In California yesterday, Gov. Olson won a victory in his effort to keep his "harmony" third term ticket together. Representative Geyer, of California, reconsidered his decision to withdraw and messaged Olson to keep his name on the slate. In a statement here Geyer said he is "unwilling to be the one person responsible for the denial of the Democratic right of the people to express themselves on any issue and so I am allowing my name to remain on the third term slate."

A series of withdrawals, led by Lieut. Gov. Patterson and former Senator McAdoo followed collapse of a "harmony" third term effort there by Olson and Secretary Ickes.

Bridges Criticizes U. S. Policy

Concord, N. H., April 1 (U.P.).—The New Deal is playing the dangerous "role of an unneutral nonparticipant in a war," Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, charged tonight in a speech before the South Church Forum.

Criticizing James H. R. Cromwell, Minister to Canada, for his recent Toronto speech "aligning the United States on one side of the conflict," Bridges said that "unfortunately it was not contrary to a former speech of the President."

"It was in keeping with the President's . . . recent statement during the neutrality debate last fall that we could not hope to be neutral in thought or feeling.

"And, despite the formal rebuke of the State Department, the speech received enthusiastic approval of many New Dealers."

Farley Praises Hull, Roosevelt

interpret that (the praise of Hull) any way you want to."

Farley, an avowed candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination, paid tribute to another famous Tennessean, Andrew Jackson.

"It was in the spirit of Andrew Jackson that a new Chief Executive entered the White House on the 4th of March, 1933," he declared.

Praise for Roosevelt

"And may it be said to his everlasting credit, no American President since the days of Andrew Jackson has fought a more desperate battle to improve the social conditions of this Nation, or won a more decisive and permanent victory, than our good friend, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Tennessee political leaders have become hopeful of a Hull-Farley Democratic ticket in the event Mr. Roosevelt does not seek a third term. In view of the President's silence, Hull has asked his friends here and elsewhere to refrain from pushing him as a possible nominee.

Farley referred to the development of the Tennessee Valley Authority, calling it a "sound conservation program, based on the wise use and control of water," to bring cheap electric power to consumers.

Lewis Hurls 3d-Party Threat At Democrats

"What a sad commentary it is that we are putting men and women off relief, careless of whether they live or die, when the Congress is asked to appropriate more money to employ more Federal detectives.

"Meet in Some Central City"

Named specifically among "these various organizations" he would call if labor is not satisfied were the American Youth Congress, the American Society for the Advancement of Colored People, the American Negro Conference and "liberal agricultural" organizations.

Lewis said the convention would be called "to meet in some central city" to "formulate a program that each and every American support."

"And," he roared, "we'll see whether mere machine politics in this country are going to be more powerful than the voice of the people of this land."

"Some few weeks ago, as chairman of Labor's Nonpartisan League, I addressed the National Youth Congress in Washington," said Lewis, adding:

"I invited them to become affiliated with Labor's Nonpartisan League. They received the invitation with enthusiasm, and since that time a complete and satisfactory working alliance has been worked out and ratified between the American Youth Congress and Labor's Nonpartisan League."

Lewis said he expected to address the Americna Negro Congress and the Society for Advancement of Colored People conventions before July 4, and asserted he would tell them.

"It is an outrage and a shame that 8,000,000 Negroes in America are prevented from voting in eight Southern States because they do not have enough money to pay their poll tax."

Democrats Here Discount Move

By the Associated Press

First general reaction among prominent Democrats here to John L. Lewis' third-party threat was to discount it.

Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, said: "That sounds like a third-party balloon to me—and I don't think the people are ready for a third party in the 1940 election."

Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, said Lewis' speech "does not alarm me at all" and added that "it is a dead mortal cinch that the Democrats will adopt a platform and select a liberal candidate agreeable to labor."

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, interpreted the move as a "threat designed to increase Lewis' influence in the Democratic Party." Saying that Lewis had no long affiliation with the party, Adams observed: "Sometimes it's easier for those who have come in late to leave than it is for the others."

Wheeler Opposes Third Party

By the United Press

San Francisco, April 1.—United States Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, apparently the only avowed candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination who is regarded favorably by C. I. O. President John L. Lewis, said tonight that if Lewis offered him the leadership of a pro-labor third party he would refuse it.

"I'm not a third party candidate," Wheeler said.

Run-Off Policy Is Reversed By Labor Board

Ballots to Include Both Rival Unions Without 'Neither' Vote

By the Associated Press

The Labor Board, by a split decision, reversed its policy yesterday on the ballot form used in run-off elections to determine a collective bargaining agent for employes under the Wagner Act.

A majority of the three-man board ruled out the previous practice of limiting workers' choice in a run-off election to a vote for or against the union which piled up a plurality but not a majority in an original election test with a rival union.

In its place, the majority established a policy of including both rival unions on a run-off ballot and eliminating the place for a "neither" vote.

Board members Edwin S. Smith and William L. Leiserson combined to bring about the change over the dissenting view of Chairman J. Warren Madden.

The run-off election is usually conducted at plants where two unions poll a close vote although neither one is able to show a majority because in a third column there is a sizable vote against both unions.

Limiting the run-off ballot to a vote for or against the union with the highest vote, Smith held, forced upon the employes the alternative of supporting the high vote union or opposing all colective bargaining.

Leiserson, in supporting Smith, said that those employes who wanted no collective bargaining had their opportunity to express themselves on the original balllot.

The change in the ballot form, Madden commented, may result in forcing a particular labor organization on employes, even though a majority "would, in fact, prefer no collective representatino."

The elimination of the word "neither," he said, does not seem to him to afford "freedom of choice."

Funeral Today For Charles Baden, D. C. Engineer

Funeral rites for Charles Clarence Baden, 68, District engineer for 40 years, will be at All Souls' Memorial Church, Cathedral and Connecticut avenues northwest, at 2 p. m. today, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery. He died Sunday.

A native of Fredericksburg, Va., Mr. Baden was educated at the University of California. Soon after his graduation he joined the District government as an engineer. He made his home at 2627 Garfield street northwest.

Mr. Baden leaves his wife, Mrs. Edith Hunter Baden, and his daughter, Mrs. Hester B. Waring.

Democratic chiefs in Congress, despite the elimination of the early economies, insist that neither additional taxes or a raise in the debt ceiling need be voted this year. They point out that last month's income tax collections were larger than expected.

Walsh, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee and a member of the naval appropriations subcommittee which now has the Navy supply bill under study, said Mr. Roosevelt in favoring restoration of the naval funds specifically referred to the controversial Guam proposal. It was voted down 123 to 114 in the House.

Opponents of the $3,000,000 asked by the Navy for harbor improvements at Guam charge it is the entering wedge to fortification of the island and would lead to trouble with Japan. The tiny island is only 1,300 miles from Tokyo. Naval officials favor fortifying Guam, but contend the present request has nothing to do with such plans.

Daily Worker Denies Foreign Tie, Registers

State Department To Ask Communist Paper to Explain

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

The publishing firm for The Daily Worker, New York Communist newspaper, registered yesterday with the State Department under the act requiring registration of foreign agents, but puzzled State Department officials by denying it was a foreign agent.

As a result, the department's Division of Controls, which handles foreign agent registrations, intends to ask the firm to clear up the contradiction by explaining why it registered.

A letter probably will be sent the firm today, it was learned, pointing out that the information supplied is not considered complete.

Officers Quizzed

It was recalled, meanwhile, that officers of the publishing firm, as well as employes, were questioned before the special District Court grand jury which investigated the activities of foreign agents over a period of ten weeks.

The grand jury, which considered evidence presented by Floyd M. Rett and Henry G. O'Donnell, Justice Department attorneys, concluded its work yesterday.

In registering with the State Department, the Daily Publishing Co., Inc., publisher of The Daily Worker, said "we do not act as agent for any foreign principal," in replying to the question in the registration form as to what foreign principals it represented.

Nevertheless, it listed, in response to this same question, Runag (Rundschau, Delta, Verlag AG) Agence France-Monde, Paris, and the United Press as news agencies from which it received cable news dispatches.

Runag Swiss Agency

Runag, the publishing firm explained, is a Swiss agency, with offices in Basel, Switzerland; Moscow, Amsterdam and Stockholm. In answers to various questions, the firm kept emphasizing it did not regard the news agencies as foreign principals.

Replying to the question as to the nature of the business of foreign principals, the publishing firm said they were engaged in the business of gathering and dispensing news "so far as we know."

It receives the Runag and Agence France-Monde news services, it said, as a result of a "contribution" by Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party in the United States, sentenced in New York in January to a four-year term in a Federal penitentiary, as a result of conviction on a passport fraud charge.

"Mr. Browder informs us," the publishing firm said, "that he arranged for the services in April, 1936, with Julius Alperi, care of France-Monde, Paris."

Accounts for the services were to be offset by contributions of news and articles sent from the United States to newspapers designated by Runag and Agence France-Monde.

Publication Rights

In addition, payment of account balances was to be made periodically to an agency of either Runag or Agence France-Monde by means of the publication rights abroad of Browder, William Z. Foster, "and others."

The registration statement was signed by Clarence A. Hathaway, editor in chief of the paper.

The "deadline" for registering with the State Department under the act requiring registration of foreign agents fell in the early part of October, 1938. About 400 individuals and concerns are now registered.

Only 3 in U. S. Draw Favorites In War-Hit Irish Sweeps

By the Associated Press

Dublin, April 1.—Americans shared but meagerly in today's drawing for Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes prizes on Friday's Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, England, holding only three of ten tickets drawn on favored entries.

In the words by which they identified themselves on their ticket stubs, the lucky three were:

"A Little Luck," 820 Fourth avenue, New York, who holds a ticket on Professor II, second favorite at 9 to 1.

"Still Waiting and Hoping," St. John's Church, Stapleton, Nebr. with a ticket on Symaethis, fourth favorite at 100 to 6.

"Dizzy Izzy' 1739 North Shore avenue, Chicago, with a ticket on Sterling Duke, bracketed with Symaethis at 100 to 6.

No Americans held tickets drawn on the 15-2 first favorite, Kilstar, or on the 100-9 third favorite, Royal Danieli.

With the war cutting the prize fund to one-eighth of that of last year, only two tickets were drawn on each entry. Last year 13 tickets were drawn on each entry.

Holders of tickets on the horse which wins Friday's race will receive £30,000 ($106,050) prizes, those having the second horse £15,000 ($53,025) prizes and those having the third horse £10,000 ($35,350).

2 Here Win Prizes

Two Washington residents won prizes in the sweepstakes. Miss Marta Brokaw, of 3300 Sixteenth street northwest, employe of the Treasury Department, drew $5$00, which she said would be used to further her studies in voice and the harp.

A nonrunner, Uplifter, was drawn by a ticket holder who signed himself J. C. Texas, 4512 Yuma street northwest. Inquiry in the neighborhood disclosed this to be a new residence and the sweepstakes holder to be a Mr. Ford. The amount of his winning will be determined later.

Hook Requests Pelley Letter Investigation

Letter to Jackson Asks Inquiry on Jury's Refusal to Indict

Representative Hook (Democrat), of Michigan, asked Attorney General Jackson in a letter yesterday to "investigate the circumstances of the action" of the Federal grand jury here in refusing to indict David Mayne in the "Pelley letters" case.

Mayne was the self-acknowledged forger of letters purportedly linking Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Committee Investigating un-American Activities, with William Dudley Pelley, leader of the Silver Shirt Legion.

Mayne told the Dies and Rules Committee that he forged the letters and then sold them to persons who placed them in Hook's hands. Hook inserted the correspondence in the record but later withdrew it after he learned it was false.

The Michigan Representative, in his letter to Jackson, said "I am going to use every effort in my legislative capacity as a member of the House of Representatives to get to the bottom of this whole matter."

During the grand jury deliberations, Gardner Jackson, legislative representative of labor's Nonpartisan League, and Harold Weisberg swore out a complaint alleging that Mayne was guilty of forgery and perjury.

Gardner Jackson and Weisberg told the Dies Committee that Weisberg bought the spurious letters from Mayne with $105 furnished by Jackson.

In addition to his own letter to the Attorney General, Hook also placed in the Congressional Record a letter to the head of the Justice Department from William A. Roberts, attorney for Gardner Jackson and Weisberg. It also urged an investigation.

David A. Pine, Federal District attorney here, said, meanwhile, that charges against James H. Dolsen, Pittsburgh Communist who was cited for contempt by the House last week for failure to answer questions of the Dies Committee, probably would be presented to a grand jury tomorrow.

The committee had questioned Dolsen concerning a Communist Party membership book made out in the name of "Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Strike Threat Mobilizes New Yorkers

All City Services Placed on Emergency Basis in Subway Row

By the Associated Press

New York, April 1.—Mayor LaGuardia tonight ordered a civil mobilization of all city departments in preparation for any emergency that might accompany a threatened general strike of 27,000 employes of the I. R. T. and B. M. T. subway systems.

The Transport Workers Union (C. I. O.) is seeking retention of the closed shop when the city takes over control of the two systems soon under its program for transfer unification.

The mayor's order directed the dock, license, sanitation, markets, water, parks, public works and housing building departments to be in readiness for any call for their services.

He issued it through Police Commissioner Valentine, whose department of 19,000 men already was being put in readiness.

He has promised that workers of the I. R. T. and B. M. T. shall have the protection of civil service status when the lines are merged under the city's operation, and has recommended that the city accept existing labor contracts subject to court review.

The union has insisted that the city assume the obligations of the contracts in every respect. LaGuardia has declared that no right to strike could exist after the men become city employes.

A walkout now would "jeopardize" life jobs under municipal civil service for the strikers, LaGuardia said.

The I. R. T. and B. M. T. subway and bus network carries more than three-fourths of the city's 5,450,000 daily transit fares.

Holmes Gives Others Credit For Drop in Traffic Toll

Stocky, white-haired Police Inspector William E. Holmes, yesterday celebrated his third birthday as traffic inspector, ending a period that saw traffic fatalities cut 56 per cent.

When the 63-year-old veteran policeman took over on April 1, 1937, the death toll for the first three months of the year was 36. Yesterday it was 16 for 1940. And this with a sharp increase in District traffic.

"It's nothing I've done," he said yesterday. "The credit goes to The Post and other organizations which have helped the Police Department gain the cooperation of the general public.

"Lives cannot be saved by law enforcement alone. It is only because the people of the District have been made traffic-conscious that fatalities have been cut sharply. Traffic accidents form one of the greatest problems that face us today. I hope the time will come when the toll of careless driving will be cut to a minimum."

From April 1, 1937 to the end of that year auto accidents took 70 lives, seven below the same period in 1936. The total for 1937 was 106, for 1938, it was 86. Last year the total was 84, with 21 killed in the first three months.

Yesterday he termed engineering improvements, such as the Scott Circle underpass, the great hope of the future. For the present, he believes the educational campaign most effective.

rushed to Sunbury, where a flood crest of 22.1 feet is expected tomorrow.

The Pennsylvania National Guard, the workers reported, moved 500 cots and 2,000 blankets into Wilkes-Barre today.

Gov. James, whose own home in Plymouth was surrounded by 4 feet of water, left the State capital at Harrisburg to get a "first-hand view" of the flood damage.

Floods that menaced Western Pennsylvania Sunday rolled on down the Ohio River Valley. Low-lying sections of West Virginia and Ohio River towns were inundated but no serious damage was reported. The Ohio was expected to reach its crest at 45 feet, 7 below flood stage, at Cincinnati on Friday.

The Delaware River flooded summer cabins and roads near Trenton, N. J. Damage was negligible.

Clearing skies brought relief to northern California where 22,000 acres of rich farm land was flooded as the Sacramento River pierced levees in Colusa and Glenn counties. Scores of farm families were homeless and spring planting was delayed indefinitely.

Albany, N. Y., April 1 (AP).—Continued cold, clear weather—with but one exception—eased flood conditions in New York State tonight, after high waters had taken a toll of four lives.

While swollen rivers and streams receded after flooding portions of central and southern New York, the Genesee River filled rapidly at Rochester where the crest was expected within 24 hours.

Waters of the Chenango and Susquehanna rivers, which forced 700 families to flee their homes in Johnson City and reached a 23-foot flood stage at Binghamton yesterday, dropped slowly.

Many highways throughout the State however, remained closed because of high waters from adjoining creeks.

House, Senate Asked to Probe U.S. 'War Guilt'

'Impeachment' Study Aim of Fish; Reynolds Cites 'Definite Duty'

By the Associated Press

Demands were made in both House and Senate yesterday for Congressional inquiries into unneutral statements attributed to American diplomats by the German government's White Book.

Representative Fish, of New York, ranking Republican on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, proposed an investigation by a special five-man committee with a view to "impeachment of any American ambassador or minister, or even of the President," if facts warranting such action were developed.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, urged an inquiry by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, asserting that war machinations imputed to Ambassadors Bullitt and Kennedy imposed "a very definite duty on the Senate" to determine the truth.

Reynolds' Resolution

The North Carolinian also offered a resolution which would have this Government "disclaim any desire to interfere" in controversies between other nations and urged recognition of "de facto" governments in other countries.

The White Book, published by the German foreign office Friday, included what was alleged to be correspondence found in the Polish foreign office in Warsaw. Papers, said to be reports from Polish Ambassadors, ascribed pro-Allied statements to Bullitt, Ambassador to Paris, and Kennedy, Ambassador to London. A series of denials followed publication of the papers.

Fish said, however, that he could not "conceive that the German foreign office should fabricate or forge the documents, as it is certainly in the interest of the German government to maintain peaceful relations with us."

At a press conference Secretary Hull said no diplomatic observation had been made by Germany to this Government in connection with the papers.

Another development was release of an open letter from Amos Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, to President Roosevelt, asserting that it "matters little" whether the papers bearing on statements attributed to Bullitt are authentic, because Bullitt on another occasion expressed similar views.

Cites Post Editorial

Pinchot went on to say that the President himself had said last April that his views were represented accurately by an editorial in The Washington Post. Pinchot said this editorial expressed the view that in event of war between Germany and the Allies, this country's entry would be a virtual certainty.

In San Francisco, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, suggested there might be some factual basis to the German allegations.

"Unquestionably, our State Department's sympathies have been with the English and French," Wheeler said, "but neither the State Department nor the ambassadors have any power or authority to commit the American people to a war policy."

U. S. May See Documents

Berlin, April 1 (INS).—Germany tonight was understood to be considering an offer to permit the United States Government to examine at first hand the 16 documents of the German White Book.

The Reich was reported contemplating two alternative courses:

1. To send the original documents to the Germany Embassy at Washington with instructions to submit them to Congress, or

2. To invite Washington to send an American commission to Berlin for the purpose of scrutinizing the papers.

James Maupin, Former Director Of Chamber, Dies

James Maupin, 70, retired real estate broker and former director of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, died yesterday at the Burtnett Nursing Home, in Takoma Park, Md., after a two-month illness.

A resident of Washington since 1907, Mr. Maupin made his home with a daughter, Mrs. T. H. Leith, 1434 Kennedy street northwest, and was treasurer of the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association. He was born in Albemarle County, Va.

Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. Leith, Mrs. Martin Kinsinger and Mrs. Joseph S. Thompson, both of Silver Spring, Md.; three sons, William F., Columbia, S. C.; James M., jr., Hyattsville, Md., and Harry D., Albuquerque; a sister, Mrs. C. C. Tilman, Roanoke, Va., and three brothers, Tandy K., Raleigh, N. C., and William C. and Tilman J. Maupin, of Salisbury, N. C.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, 8424 Georgia avenue, Silver Spring. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

The four-motored transport is to be put into service on an east coast South American route to Rio de Janeiro

U. S. May Fight Flood of Goods From Britain

Depreciated Pound Threatens Increase Damaging Industry

By Sandor S. Klein
United Press Staff Writer

The United States Government shortly will take steps to protect American industry and commerce against a potential flood of British goods stimulated by the depreciated pound sterling, the United Press was informed last night.

The first step, in all likelihood, will be taken this week in the form of an order by the Treasury to customs collectors to recognize the official rate for the pound in assessing duty on British goods arriving in this country.

The official rate ranges between $4.02½ and $4.03½, as against the free market or unofficial rate, which during the past week has ranged between $3.44¾ and $3.71¼. The $3.44¾ was the lowest level for the pound since April 15, 1933.

Many Buy at Lower Rate

Although the official rate is quoted in New York, American importers have been availing themselves of the lower free market price.

The Treasury's anticipated action is an outgrowth of discussions with State Department officials, who have been concerned, particularly because currency depreciation practices are barred by the tri-partite monetary agreement and the escape clause of the United States-United Kingdom reciprocal trade agreement.

The order to customs collectors will require interim assessments at the official rate. Later, if the importer can show that he purchased pounds at the free market rate to pay for th goods, he will receive a refund based on an assessment at the lower unofficial rate.

U. S. Disappointed

Officials here are disappointed over Britain's failure to correct the disparities in the rates for the pound. The British, however, are eager to get their hands on as many dollars as possible for war purchases here.

With a depreciated pound, the unit cost of British goods is cheaper, but the resultant expansion in exports to the United States is so great that the British are getting more dollars in the aggregate.

If this Government feels that there has been unfair, competitive devaluation on the part of the British or French the United States Treasury could utilize its $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund to counteract any prejudicial effects.

As a last resort, this Government can invoke the safeguarding clause of the reciprocal trade agreement to terminate the pact.

Germany Faces Starvation By Fall, U. S. Survey Finds

Only Food From Neighboring Countries, Already Hard Hit by War, Can Save Nazis From Famine, Analysts' Report Says

By Walter Fitzmaurice
International News Service Staff Writer

An administration analysis of Germany's food resources and requirements envisions the Reich's starvation within a measurable period unless neighbor nations relieve the shortage with supplies they can ill afford to spare.

Government officials, in permitting na examination of the analysis last night, said the food crisis it forecasts unquestionably accounts for today's conference between the German, Hungarian, Yugoslavian and Italian ministers of agriculture at Budapest.

Purpose of the German minister, Walther Darre, the experts understood, is to persuade Hungary and Yugoslavia to accept the services of German technicians and machinery to gear their production of fats and cereals to Germany's needs. From Italy, they believed Darre hopes to get olives and fruits.

Winter Toll Heavy

The experts said the damage inflicted by winter on Germany's own crops has likewise extended to the Danube Basin crops, diminishing the Hungarian and Yugoslavian capacity to export.

Completed only two weeks ago, the analysis predicts a German food crisis by next September. Even now, it asserts, the Reich's food supply falls short both in quantity and variety of sustaining the kind of work demanded of the German people.

The analysts described German official statistics as uncertain. Outstanding conclusions were:

1. Neither the population at large nor the armament workers today possess the body reserves needed for continued strenuous physical activity under an inadequate diet.

2. At the war's outbreak, the German war ministry declared the calorie value of armaments workers to be 10 per cent below standard.

3. Increase of rations allowances to appease labor unrset will exhaust supplies of meats and fats within one year.

Transportation Difficult

With respect to starvation prospects, the analysis states the position inversely by saying the availability of bread grains, sugar and potatoes may avert conditions of starvation for some time.

It declares, however, that transportation troubles, increased demands and reduced stocks will make increased domestic output an urgent necesity, and adds that it is improbable in view of the necessary shift of men from agriculture to military activities and other shortages that Germany will be able to maintain even the existing level of production.

Officials said the authors of the analysis are now engaged on further studies concerning the capacity of Russia and the Danube Basin to supply German needs.

Luncheons to Honor British Laborite M.P.

Sir Stafford Cripps, former solicitor general of England and Laborite member of Parliament, will be guest of honor at a luncheon at the National Press Club at 1 p. m. tomorrow and will speak at a luncheon of the Barnard College Club at the Mayflower Hotel at 1:15 p. m. Saturday.

Sir Stafford is due to arrive in Washington by air from California early today.

D. C. Boys to Be Guests Of Local Cornell Club

Some 20 boys from high and preparatory schools in the District area will be entertained by the Cornell Club of Washington tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club.

Most of the boys will be guests of Cornell at the university's spring day events in May. Speaker at tomorrow's dinner will be Prof. Briston Adams, of Cornell. Col. Walter Burns is in charge of arrangements.

Brown Alumni to Hold Dinner at 7 Tonight

Washington alumni of Brown University will hold their annual dinner tonight at the Army and Navy Club at 7 o'clock.

Prof. Ben W. Brown and James L. Whitcomb will speak.

Allies to Defy Soviet, Intensify Blockade In Pacific Waters

By International News Service

London, April 1.—Britain's war cabinet tonight mapped far-reaching measures to broaden and tighten the blockade against Germany.

In an extraordinary meeting, Prime Minister Chamberlain and his key colleagues were authoritatively declared to have decided upon steps that may affect Soviet Russia and Norway.

An unimpeachable source said the iron ore Germany imports from Sweden through Narvik, Norway, will be energetically "intercepted."

It also was reliably stated that the Allies will immediately intensify their blockade activities in the Pacific to halt shipments of materials in Soviet vessels to Vladivostok, destined for Germany.

Risk Soviet Wrath

In their new campaign to close Germany's back door and prevent her neutral neighbors from buying surplus supplies for resale to the Reich, the Allies thus appeared ready to risk the wrath of Soviet Russia or any other nonbelligerent power.

The Soviet Union already has protested that because all Russian ships are state owned they are not subject to contraband control.

More serious than halting Russian ships, however, would be the Allied seizure of materials purchased by the U. S. S. R. in the United States and other Western Hemisphere countries, if the Allies decide to take such steps. London and Paris have voiced the suspicion that "abnormal" supplies bought by Russia and other German neighbors were actually intended for the Reich to evade the blockade.

Ignore Neutrals

As for Norway, a British source declared efforts will be made to "preserve the sovereignty of Norwegian waters as far as compatible with the blockade." But it was made clear the Allies plan to extend their blockade in the face of any legalistic obstacles.

A Copenhagen dispatch to the Daily Telegraph said it is understood the Norwegian Parliament may meet secretly tomorrow to consider stopping the transit of Swedish ore across Norway to safeguard that country's peace.

London talks with Norway on this subject coincided with the beginning of trade negotiations with Yugoslavia by the British.

Overtures to Rumania

They also made ready to start in a few days a concentrated effort to wean Rumania, the Reich's most important supply source, away from Germany. Anglo-Rumanian trade talks are due to begin in London later this week.

At the same time, Britain's envoys to Italy and the southeastern countries were en route back to London to help plane efforts aimed at cutting Germany off from that part of Europe.

Artillery Roars Near Saar

By the Associated Press

Paris, April 1.—Heavy cannonading reverberated today in the wooded valleys of the Saar River sector accompanied by sharp fighting in the air.

The French high command said artillery fire was "particularly heavy" west of the Saar River.

The longer-than-usual night military communique told a story of a resumption of bombardment by big guns after a Sunday layoff.

At the same time the communique declared German and Allied forces fought "several" air battles, the results of which were not yet known. All French planes returned safely, however, it was said.

Yesterday, the French acknowledged two of their single-seater fighters went down in a dog fight with a "much superior" German force, but one of the French pilots bailed out to safety with his parachute. (The Germans said seven French planes were shot down in three separate fights.)

While this new spurt of activity was in progress on the Western Front, Premier Reynaud conferred with several of France's principal envoys in Europe, and told his cabinet about Allied war decisions which seemed to foreshadow bolder effort to blockade Germany.

The premier talked at length and in turn with Paul Bargeton, Charles Corbin and Andre Francois-Poncet, respectively the ambassadors to Belgium, Britain and Italy.

Other French envoys are expected home soon from Ankara, Bucharest, Belgrade and The Hague, to be informed on French plans.

Son Accused of Slaying Mother Is Held in Gallinger

defendant, saw him a strange figure with long, pale face, accentuated by his opened dark gray sweater, topping a soiled white shirt.

His gaze on them was fixed, puzzled, but occasionally his eyes lowered, as if his mind struggled for thought. He studied, then, his oversized brown easy slippers.

But once he flared up. A photographer had levelled a camera at him. Jerome tensed in his chair beside his counsel, James A. O'Shea, and a fleeting lull occurred. Then he relaxed.

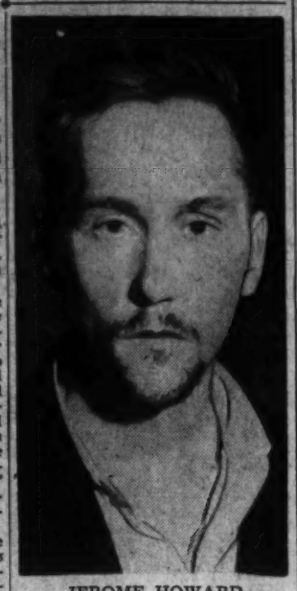
The scene in the morgue, on the Gallinger Hospital grounds, was the authorities' first move since Saturday afternoon when a reporter for The Washington Post followed up a tip that something uncanny had occurred in the shuttered Howard house at 815 Taylor street northwest. Then he and a colleague and police found Mrs. Howard dead in her bedroom from numerous knife wounds, and her son, Jerome, gibbering incoherently that he "did it" and that the house, obviously untenanted by other persons than himself, was "full of people."

The next move will bring Jerome before a grand jury. His sanity has come into question and it is probable that the district attorney's office itself will request a lunacy hearing for the son. He once was inmate of an asylum in Colorado.

Some of the testimony could have been lifted by lines from one of the weird story magazines. Mrs. Margaret Lilly, of 813 Taylor street, emitted by way of illustration a ghostly groan such as she testified to hearing, with a sound like a body falling from the Howards' house at 11 a. m., March 13.

At 3 a. m. of the same day she had heard a hammering sound. She said she had heard these before. At 6:30 p. m. of the same day, Jerome, his face cut and bruised, had come to her door, asking for his mother, she testified.

Solidly factual, his face unemotional, W. J. Howard, attorney in the Land Office, Interior Department, said to a question from Coroner MacDonald, "for 40 years she was my wife."



JEROME HOWARD

"What relation are you to Jerome Howard?"

"He is my son."

He said they had left here some 16 or 17 years ago. He had remitted them moneys. "The last I saw of Jerome, he was a little boy about 8 or 9 years old—until last summer and then again for a brief time Saturday night at No. 10 Police Precinct."

"I said 'Son, what can I do for you?' 'I'd like to get out of here,' he said."

Southeast Adds to Its Neighborhood Theaters

Hi-Land Planned by Fairlawn Company; And Now a New Title for 'Personal History;' People and Plans on Local Theater Scene

By Richard L. Coe,
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

TO THE EVER-INCREASING list of neighborhood film houses add a new one for the Southeast quarter of Maj. l'Enfant's celebrated plan.

The new cinema chaplet will be called the Hi-Land and will be open for business at Twenty-seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, early in the fall. Seating 800, the Hi-Land will boast what is described as "de luxe" appointments and will be constructed by the Mohler Construction Co., the third theater owned and operated by the Fairlawn Amusement Co. in the territory east of the Anacostia River.

This announcement was made yesterday by Lloyd J. Wineland, president of the Fairlawn Amusement Co., which also operates the Congress and Fairlawn Theaters.

Today's big event is the screening of "Young Tom Edison," the Mickey Rooney prelude to the Spencer Tracy portrait of the adult inventor. This opens Friday at the Capitol with a stage revue uniting Vilma and Buddy Ebsen, that remarkable sister-brother team that was a delight in the "Follies," before Buddy caught the Super Chief for the Gold Coast.

IF YOU READ Vincent Sheean's autobiography of a war-correspondent, "Personal History," you were probably more than curious about what was going to come out of Walter Wanger's plans to film that outspoken story. The book came out about three years ago, was bought for the films, assigned to a scenarist who did not do the work justice. Another writer set to work, came out with an elegant script only to have its plot interest ruined by the Spanish War developments. A third scenarist took it over, emphasized the Spanish War angle, only to have that be replaced in the world's mind by the Nazi advances. A fourth script was dated by the rapid developments of last September—and by then Sheean had written "Not Peace But a Sword."

Finally though, a story has come out of "Personal History," the cameras are in Holland retaking final scenes, Alfred Hitchcock, James Hilton and Robert Benchley have had a hand in the work.

Only trouble with all this is that the picture doesn't even remotely resemble anything in "Personal History." So Wanger has announced that this film costarring Joel McCrea and Laraine Day will be released under a new title.

The East Room of the White House has looked down on some notable, brilliant gatherings, but yesterday morning those storied walls must have smiled happily at the visitors whom an Executive secretary was showing about. Those visitors were the British Lilliputians, so minutely a major part of the Earle's "Big Little Show of 1940." So captivated by his foreign guests was the official, that he saw that each received a gardenia from the Executive Mansion's Flower Room. It's interesting to think how treasured these white flowers will be in later years when they are pressed and yellow.

TRAVELLERS: Joe Pasternak arrives today for a brief visit with the now-returned-from-Hollywood Bernie Kreisler of Universal. The discoverer of Deanna Durbin and Gloria Jean has a full calendar for his 48-hour visit, but will meet the press at the Carlton tomorrow afternoon. Back from Hollywood, whither he won a junket as winner of the Showmanship Award of Motion Picture Herald, Ray Bell, motion picture pressure man supreme, has of late been catching up on the news of the legitimate theater.

At last we have more definite news of N. B. B., whom we visited yesterday afternoon. While not himself by a long shot, this column's regular conductor has given those bugs a real tough Maginot line to conquer. He's ensconced in the neat, new Doctors Hospital awaiting the final report of a thorough, which N. B. B. describes as "very," expedition by the medicos. That anyone should be so sick as he has been is plenty tough, but for anyone who loves and knows the theater as well as he does to be forced to spend a couple of weeks without entering a playhouse seems to make bad matters worse.

Hollywood Parade

By Jimmy Fidler

Cleveland, Ohio, April 1.—Judging from a blast in this morning's mail, Randolph Scott's visit in Charlotte, N. C., will not endear him to the press. My informants are two reporters on a leading Tarheel daily. Sent by their managing editor to interview the visiting fireman, they failed to so much as gain admittance to the exalted presence. Mr. Scott, after keeping them waiting for a half hour, finally sent word that he would be much too busy for the entire week of his stay to have a single moment for the press. The reporters, to put it mildly, seem a bit irked. And, honestly, can you blame them?

FIDLER

By what possible process of reasoning do so many of our morning glories of Filmville convince themselves that they are too important to repay public interest with common courtesy? How can they forget the simple fact that they are each, like it or not, ambassadors of an industry which exists only by public favor—an industry that could stand a lot more of it, too, as box-office records testify?

You see in Hollywood an amazing paradox. On the one hand, a host of rising stars who would give their eye-teeth for favorable notice from the press—who pay a good portion of their incomes to publicity agents, and lie awake nights trying to concoct new schemes to make a favorable impression on the public. On the other, you see the graduates of the same school, finally arrived "in lights," deliberately tearing down their fan followings by just gestures as this faux pas of Randy Scott's.

IDOL CHATTER: Errol Flynn's biography—and bank book—refute that old wheeze about rolling stones gathering no moss. Peas-in-a-pod: Helen Vinson and Virginia Vail. Despite the fact that she calls him "Russie Bussie," the Russell Simpsons have been happily married for 30 years. In-a-line description of Vera Vague: Mary Boland imitating Gracie Allen's imitation of Tizzie Lish. Judy Garland would be a natural for the Jive-enile lead. Suicidal approach: "And now, Mr. Burns, I'm sure our readers would like to hear about your love life." It's the star who insists on acting out his next role for every listener who gets my nomination as Public Ennui No. 1.

Here's a rib-tickler from this ayem's mail. Seems two of the lads in the Twentieth Century casting department, after arguing vehemently about the type of man who should wear a double-breased suit, made a one buck wager on the question and decided to let Cesar Romero, noted for his taste in dress, be the arbiter. When they telephoned, his housekeeper said that he was not at home—but added she could have him call if it were important. "Of course, it's important," announced the betster handling the phone. An hour later, Cesar called—and flamed when he learned the reason for it all. He was in San Francisco!

Felix Ferry went to the same voice teacher, but was charged a special rate—$5 for three lessons. The teacher permitted this special rate because Ferry's lessons were at 9 a. m., when he had had only two hours' sleep. His voice, therefore, was hoarse and—while the regular pupils watched this object lesson—Ferry had to sing while standing on his head.

"THE AMERICAN WHITE BOOK," by Alsop & Kintner, will be published by Simon & Schuster. It will include statements by President Roosevelt, Cordell Hull and Adolph A. Berle, jr., about America's foreign policy . . . A long-shot bettor took 4-to-1 odds, wagering that Saroyan's "Time of Your Life" will win the Pulitzer Prize. Saroyan was told, at Sardi's, that someone was betting on his play to win the prize. He beamed: "Even money, eh?" . . . Sam Levene, of "Margin for Error" met an introspective actor and confessed: "I used to be like you—I'd search into myself all the time" . . . "And what happened?" he was asked . . . "What do you supposed happened?" Sam shrugged. "I stopped, because I never found anything."

Clare Boothe Putsch Funnier In Return Visit

'Margin for Error' Is Improved Comedy Since Debut Here

"MARGIN FOR ERROR," Richard Aldrich and Richard Myers present a comedy melodrama in two acts by Clare Boothe. Directed by Otto L. Preminger. Setting by Donald Oenslager. At the National Theater.

THE CAST

Otto B. Horst ..... Alexander Clark
Baron Max Von Alcenstor ..Morgan Farley
Officer Finkel-tein .....Sheldon Leonard
Frieda ..... Cyrilla Dorne
Dr. Jennings ....John McKee
Sophie Baumer ....Doris Dudley
Karl Baumer ....Kurt Katch
Thomas K. Denny .....Don Terry
Captain Mulrooney .....Edward Nannary

Far funnier than when it opened here in October, "Margin for Error," Miss Clare Boothe's sarcastic gibe at That Guy Hitler, returned last evening to the National Theater where first night neutrals laughed at the Naziisms like a pack of bellowing belligerents.

For as everyone with an eye or an ear or two by now must know, the acidulous author of "The Women" and "Kiss the Boys Goodby," in the "Margin for Error" has pointed her tongue at the Austrian paperhanger and his demolition of the Third Reich. With the wisdom of a Sibyl, she has recognized that the surest way to attack is to ridicule and what she doesn't do to a dastardly Nazi consul and all that he represents shouldn't be done, in the dialectic words of Mr. Lou Holtz, to a dug.

Some Differences Noted

Besides the addition of some merry lines and business to the first act, the new cast of the play also seems considerably brighter about the whole business, a natural and happy situation. The murder and consequent loss of the nasty Nazi representative is made easier to bear by the earlier appearance on the scene of the American Fuehrer, that ridiculous chap who hints that he taught elocution in Milwaukee for 20 years. In the first week of the play's life he was a rat whose fascination exceeded his opportunities. Furthermore, Alexander Clark is far more devastating in the role than was Philip Coolidge.

But "Margin for Error's" most endearing figure is flatfoot Moe Finkelstein, that descendant of Moses, in the words of Moe, "the first Fuehrer," assigned by a prankish mayor to stand guard over the official residence of the Nazi consul in the greatest of American cities. Sheldon Leonard loses none of Sam Leven's effectiveness in this wise-cracking role of a democratic American who keeps his head so clearly when all suspicion points to him. It's an effervescent, resourceful performance of the long, important part and for this, the Chicago company of the comedy should give three cheers.

Kurt Katch Scores

Kurt Katch as the despicable consul has his first role on the English-speaking stage after a notable career in Germany. His aplomb and his furious rages alternate with the superb control of an expert actor and one will watch for his subsequent appearances with much interest. He succeeds Otto L. Preminger in the role, but Mr. Preminger is with the present company by remote control—as director. One might quarrel with Director Preminger's rearrangement of the difficult action which preceds the first act curtain. It seems too pointed in its desire to let the audience know what is happening, although this criticism may arise only from a second visit.

Blonde and charmingly wide-eyed, Miss Doris Dudley makes a far more effective Sophie than did her predecessor Elspeth Eric. John McKee has the Bert Lytell role; Don Terry succeeds Leif Erickson as the reporter; Morgan Farley has the Bramwell Fletcher role of the secretary, and Cyrilla Dorne is the pert German-speaking maid. Edward Nannary succeeds Edward McNamara as the bluecoat to whom falls Miss Boothe's most brilliant tag-line. And when you see "Margin for Error," don't miss that tagline.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 1.

I hear that the New York critics are still hopping mad, after picking "Mr. Chips" as the best picture of the year.

that the award should go to "G. W. T. W." And Sam Wood's friends feel pretty sad about the whole thing. The ironic part of it all is that if Sam, who directed "Mr. Chips," hadn't been willing to step into Vic Fleming's shoes and pinch-hit for him when he was taken ill and was off the picture for five weeks, which rushed it to completion and made it ready for release on December 26, it wouldn't have been in line for the 1939 award. So Sam, in doing his good deed, and helping his pal, Vic, cheated himself out of an Oscar.

There was a battle royal in one of the cafes the other night when a man who didn't know what he was talking about spoke up and said the English producer, Victor Saville, had done most of "Mr. Chips." When the truth of the matter is, Mr. Saville wasn't even on the set when the picture was made, with the exception of one scene, which he was allowed to direct—after which, Sam Wood retook it. Now you tell one!

No one applauded Ann Miller more than Eleanor Powell at the "George White Scandals." I'll bet Ann will have a contract before she leaves town. For, combined with her dancing, which is by way of being wonderful, she's picked up a hunk of glamour.

Richardo Cortez tells me a story that makes me wonder if turnabout is fair play. The other day Ric was directing "The Girl in 313" at Twentieth Century. Playing a bit in the picture is Ruth Clifford. Ric said to me, "And 19 years ago today, on this same stage, I was making my first test, and got a bit part. Ruth Clifford was the star."

The greatest scandal in town doesn't concern movie folks, but the high school kids who went thousands strong to Balboa over Easter week-end. A hundred and twenty-five kids were arrested, most of whom didn't have enough money to pay their fines, and had to work it out on the road. They're now talking about changing our schools' vacation in order to break up the jamboree which has gone on now for several years.

The gossipers got the wrong idea the other night when Louis Hayward threw a glass of water in Ida Lupino's face at the Sphinx Club. Ida's veil was on fire.

Army Selects 175 Officers For School

Leavenworth Study Awarded to Many World War Men

The Army acted yesterday to save many of its World War officers from military oblivion.

One hundred and seventy-five officers, most of whom entered the service in 1917-18, were picked to attend the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., next fall, in addition to the normal class of 225, designated some time ago.

"Selection for Leavenworth" has long been considered in the Army as the turning point of an officer's career. Those who obtain the coveted assignment and graduate are considered in line for high rank and choice billets, while officers missing out are supposed to be doomed to obscurity.

Under a new policy, 300 instead of 225 officers will be assigned to the Leavenworth School next year, another class of 400 entering in February. If the plan is successful, the larger number will be sent each year until most of the World War group deemed qualified has gone through the school.

Fifteen officers stationed here or at nearby posts were on yesterday's list of those selected for the military school. They are Lieut. Col. Wilhelm D. Styer; Majs. Walton W. Cox, Haskell Allison, Bruce C. Hill (Fort Belvoir, Va.), Willis E. Teale, John E. Wood, Elbridge Colby and Peter J. Floyd; Capts. Wesley T. Guest, Gerald E. Galloway, John S. Seybold, J. Trimble Brown (Fort Meade, Md.), Fernand G. Dumont (Fort Meade) and Fay Smith.

Two Washingtonians, Majs. Frederick W. Hyde and Percy L. Sadler, and a College Park (Md.) man, Maj. Everett L. Upson, also were selected for the school.

Other officers on the list were:

Corps of Engineers—Majors, D. Lee Hooper and Reading Wilkinson; captains, Hollis D. Clay, Harry E. Fisher, Wayne E. Moore and Harry A. Montgomery.

Cavalry—Majors, Vance W. Batchelor, Carleton Burgess, Hugh G. Culton, Waldemar A. Falck, Harold G. Holt, Marcus E. Jones, Harry Knight, Oscar W. Koch, George R. Millholland, Holmes G. Two 12-Year-Olds Talk to Chief G-Man In Broadcast to Boost Police Boys Clubs

Charles Newman (left), of 637 G street southwest, and William Stokes, 934 G street southwest, both 12, felt the pride that any boy their age would after having talked with J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the G-Men. The youths appeared with Hoover on a radio broadcast last night in connection with the Metropolitan Police Boys Club campaign

Two 12-year-old Washington boys held back their excitement last night while doing what some millions of boys would like to do—sit down for a few minutes across a table from Chief G-Man J. Edgar Hoover and talk about . . . well, such people as Alvin Karpis, for example.

The three met and talked during a broadcast over WRC in connection with the Police Boys Club Campaign, and Charley Newman, of 637 G street southwest, and William Stokes, of 943 G street southwest, the two boys, said later: "It was fine. We liked it."

First, William invited Hoover to "visit the boys in each of our five clubhouses." The chief of the FBI told them what he thought of the club activity, before they plunged him into details of how he caught so many bandits.

"For nearly 23 years now, I have been in daily contact with not only law enforcement, but with the problems that boys and young men must meet and solve if they are going to develop into successful citizens," he said across the table.

"For many years I have constantly urged law enforcement officers and civic leaders to do just what your boys' clubs are doing here in Washington. Here is a movement that is still in its infancy. The surface has scarcely been scratched, but already juvenile decline as much as 79 per cent in some precincts. The people of Washington should indeed be proud of this record and it only proves what can be done when we all set out to do our bit," he said.

Mack L. Langford, chairman of the 1940 campaign, explained that the club is "beginning its seventh year of service to 14,000 needy boys."

He said that Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, "tells me that in six years, during the life of the Boys' Club, juvenile crime has decreased in some precincts over 79 per cent. Five clubhouses . . . and a summer camp in Maryland are maintained for these boys of substandard domestic circumstances. Athletic, vocational, educational and musical training are given and medical and dental supervision are accorded." A section of the Police Boys' Band played.

Wilson Leaves Pine's Staff; Will Practice

Criminal Division Chief To Join Private Firm; Served D. C. 9 Years

John J. Wilson, college law professor and veteran prosecutor, resigned last night as chief of the criminal division of the staff of District Attorney David A. Pine.

Wilson, appointed to the staff of District Attorney Leo A. Rover in 1931, will join the law firm of Whiteford, Hart and Carmody.

The resignation was effective today, so that Wilson will be leaving office as his chief takes the oath as a justice of the District Court. The 11 sitting justices of the court will preside at the enrobing of Justice Pine at 10 a. m. today.

Police Judge Edward M. Curran is scheduled to succeed Pine as district attorney this afternoon.

Began Career Young

Wilson was born in Washington July 22, 1901. He attended grade schools in nearby Maryland and studied law at George Washington University, where he received his degree in 1921. Wilson then was too young to take the examination for admission to the bar and had to wait a year to begin his professional career.

After nine years in private practice Wilson was appointed an assistant district attorney. He took part in the prosecution of Bishop James Cannon, jr., for alleged violations of the Corrupt Practices Act, being one of the counsel who won two Government victories in the Supreme Court before the case was tried in the lower court.

To Continue Lectures

Wilson directed the extensive prosecutions which followed the collapse of the Park Savings Bank here, securing conviction of Assistant Treasurer Benedict M. McNeil of conspiracy to take $50,000 from the bank.

More recently Wilson collaborated with Pine in the prosecution which smashed the Warring numbers business.

Wilson plans to continue his lectures on criminal law and the conflicts of laws in the Southeastern University law school.

Wilson was married in 1923 to Miss Alice Grant, of Washington. They live at Woodley Park Towers, 2737 Devonshire place northwest.

Postlude

District of Columbia Chapter, American Guild of Organists, presents William O. Tufts Monday night in the opening recital of a festival of organ music in Washington Chapel Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. Program: Prelude on "Rejoice, Ye Pure in Heart" (Sowerby), "Autumn" (Noble), "Cathedral Prelude" (Clokey), Toccatina for Flute (Yon), "Storm King" Symphony (Dickinson).

To William O. Tufts, organist of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, was assigned the honor of opening the five-day series of recitals which are being presented this week by the local chapter of the American Guild of Organists, and the Washington Chapel of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was well filled with auditors who had accepted the public invitation to become better acquainted with the literature of the organ. The acquaintance gained at these recitals should be rewarding, for transcriptions and arrangements of other than organ music and bared from the programs.

BROWN

One commends the program committee and Mr. Tufts for having devoted the opening recital to works by composers who are American, either by birth or the choice of citizenship. In the former category were Leo Sowerby, Clarence Dickinson and Joseph Waddell Clokey, and in the latter Thomas Tertius Noble and Pietro Alessandro Yon.

Of these composers Leo Sowerby is the most original and inventive, and his works for organ are only a part of his creative activity which includes symphonies, concertos, chamber music and choral compositions. His prelude on "Rejoice, Ye Pure in Heart," with which Mr. Tufts began the recital, is ingenious in registration and remarkable for the number of tonal effects within a small space. Without utilizing the heavy resources of the organ, it displays unusual combinations of stops and fine harmonic coloring.

Noble's "Autumn" is a reverie in the English style, melodically pleasing and quietly registered. The meditative theme is but slightly elaborated and the mood is consistently related to the title. Clokey's "Cathedral Prelude" is an attractive piece that bears out its title by conventional use of the bell stop. Yon's toccatina for flute is a clever trifle, interesting for the adroitness of the writing.

The major composition, as to structural form and thematic contest, was Dickinson's "Storm King" symphony, an extended tone-poem with a basic program descriptive of scenes at the composer's home on the Hudson. Two of its sections, the delicately intoned canon and the reflective intermezzo, are subjective in their emotional implications, while phenontena of the material world are suggested in the opening allegro with its alternations of storm and calm, in the fanciful scherzo and in the finale with its culminating "Hymn to Nature."

Tonight's recital will be played by Gene Stewart, organist of Waugh Methodist Church, and Nancy Poore, organist of Georgetown Presbyterian Church, who have prepared a program of Bach, Karg-Elert, Vierne and Widor.

Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, yesterday suggested a supplementary appropriation of $38,000,000 for the rest of the present fiscal year (to June 30), as well as increased funds for next year.

Pointing out that the April average is 200,000 below the March average, Cochran told the House that Col. Harrington had informed him $38,000,000 extra would be necessary if the rolls were not to be slashed still further in May and June.

tained in the leap which cost her husband his life.

Miss Elizabeth Manly, 40, in a serious condition at Emergency with second and third degree burns.

Henry E. Roberts, 76, uncle of Mrs. Jones, treated for minor burns after he was carried down a ladder by firemen.

Joseph James, 38, and his wife, Marian, 34, treated at Georgetown Hospital for burns and bruises, and later released.

The four-alarm fire which sent 250 District firemen into action and routed more than 250 more out of bed to take their places was discovered by a third-floor tenant, John Appelt, who turned in a local alarm at 2:20 a. m.

No. 2 Truck Company, first to respond to the alarm, found smoke enveloping the upper story, but no sign of blaze. Ladders were run up. While tenants poured out of the building, the entire roof burst into flames.

Hundreds of spectators, attracted to the scene, watched several persons jump to the ground or be aided down ladders.

Leaving all of their belongings behind them, most of the tenants escaped clad only in night clothes. Many were taken in by neighbors.

Total damage was estimated at about $100,000. A faulty flue was termed by firemen as the cause of the inferno.

Remodeled Stable

Reconstruction of the tragedy began yesterday when separate investigations were launched by the District Building Inspector's Office, the Fire Department and the District Morgue. Investigation by the House subcommittee on police and fire affairs was urged by Representative Bolles after a statement issued by District Building Inspector Col. John W. Oehmann.

Col. Oehmann pointed out that the apartment had been remodeled from a private stable in 1925. Under the present District law, the building is inspected regularly under the building laws effective in 1925 and not under the most recent rulings. It was inspected six months ago by Assistant Inspector T. J. Roche and found to conform with the building and fire laws of 1925.

"Under the new building code we can't go back and require old buildings to conform with new regulations since the courts have ruled the code is not retroactive," Col. Oehmann declared.

Reporting on the results of a personal investigation made yesterday, Col. Oehmann said a brick had been found missing in the chimney adjacent to a first-floor closet and that this would cause "a strong updraft."

Fire Marshal Calvin G. Lauber refused comment on the missing brick or on the source of the blaze.

The interior partitions of the building were of celotex (a thin board similar to plywood), he said. Under the inspection rules of 1925, the partitions should have been covered with plaster. The chief inspector said he was unable to determine whether they had been plaster-covered, due to the damage done by the flames, but assumed they had, since they passed inspection.

He further explained that original plans for the walls called for what is known in the building trade as a "1, 2, 4 composition"—sand, gravel and concrete, but that in his inspection he had discovered the walls were a compostion of cinder gravel, frequently composed of unburned coal.

Reconstruction of the building was done by the late Henry Brawner, jr. It had previously been the property of Clarence Moore, prominent Washingtonian, who died when the Titanic went down.

Mrs. Ella Shade, the resident manager, said she believed the reason many tenants had not been able to escape down the four stairways was because the steel and concrete steps were linoleum-covered "and went up in fire like dry pine."

Col. Oehmann said there was no regulation, to his knowledge, on linoleum-covered stairways. He pointed out that the building needed no fire escapes since the stairways were of concrete.

Grandmothers Club Arrives To Ask Congress for Honor Day

Mrs. Emma C. Thomas (left), 83, and Mrs. Catherine Miner, 42, are the oldest and youngest members of the National Grandmothers Club in Washington to appeal for establishment of a "Grandmother's Day"

The National Grandmothers' Club trooped into Washington last night to put the heat on Congress for a "Grandmothers' Day," and to leave at the White House an honorary membership pin for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, with nine "service" bars for the Roosevelt grandchildren.

Members of the House and Senate will be made aware of the presence of the 75 grandparents at 1 p. m. today when legislators are to be asked to support a bill establishing the first Sunday in October as "National Grandmothers' Day."

"If they don't give us a Grandmothers' Day we're going to take over Mothers' Day, that's all!" exclaimed Mrs. Grace A. Gray, Chicago, national club secretary. Representative Ralph Church (Republican), Illinois, has promised to introduce a bill, she said.

The grandmothers will have tea at the White House at 4 p. m. today, but presentation of the pin to the First Grandmother will have to be made "in absentia." Mrs. Roosevelt is on the West Coast. The pin will be a regulation one bearing the figure of a swaddling baby with one bar for each of her grandchildren.

Most of the delegation, here for a four-day pilgrimage to include the tombs of George and Martha Washington and the Unknown Soldier, hails from Chicago. Mrs. Emma C. Thomas, 83, Chicagoan and eldest in the club, is authority for the story that the "girls" stayed up "all night" in the train, playing poker and pinochle. She added:

"I have two great-grandchildren and one grandchild and I taught them how to ride horses. I used to take them out riding horseback with me every morning.

"On the farm in Indiana, I used to break all the colts. I've never worn glasses in my life and I still have all my own teeth."

The club's "baby" is Mrs. Catherine Miner, 42, also of Chicago. She is teaching her three grandchildren the fundamentals of boxing.

Making up for "the time I lost over the washboard by traveling and having fun in Europe and America," is Mrs. Clara Shelkopf, 68, grandmother to 14.

"We represent a new generation of grandmothers that wants to have fun to compensate for those 16-hour workdays," declared Mrs. Anna Karnick, 58, of Cicero, Ill.

Mrs. Katherine Weiler—"my birthday's today, but my age is not for publication"—believes modern child-raising methods are "100 per cent better than those of my time," chiefly because baby doctors know more.

In Niagara Falls, Mrs. Weiler's home town, Mrs. Bea Good, 47, is known as "Jimmy Good," manager of two men's dance bands, one of which made its first change in membership in the 13 years under her direction "when the sax player died."

De Alba to Attend Mexican Parley

Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Pan American Union, who lives at 4514 Connecticut avenue northwest, will leave for Patzcuaro, Mexico, Saturday, to represent the union at the Pan American Congress on Indian Affairs, it was announced yesterday.

Mrs. Emma O. Goodenow, 80, died Sunday at the home of her son, Reginald M. Goodenow, electrical engineer at the Navy Department, 703 Gist avenue, Silver Spring, Md. She had been an invalid for three years, having made her home in Silver Spring for the last six years.

HOW MUCH SHOULD ONE SPEND

. . . for a hotel room when visiting New York?

At The Waldorf-Astoria, the single room at $7 (or the double at $10) is considerably larger than an ordinary hotel room. You enter through a private foyer. The furnishings and decorations are modern in the best sense. The walls are sound proofed. The closet is large and well lighted. And the bath is exceptionally equipped.

Add these facts to the prestige of a world-famous address and you have the true value of a room at The Waldorf-Astoria.

You know the name— now look at the price and you'll buy Mount Vernon rye!

You're sure to like Mount Vernon—there's no doubt about that.

You'll like to drink it, for it's distinctive and delicate in flavor.

You'll like to serve it, too, for it's rich in tradition . . . famous as the "bond of friendship" for many generations.

And you'll certainly like the price, for today this illustrious bonded rye is priced lower than even many lower-proof blends.

This makes Mount Vernon a matchless value—almost too good to be true.

A Tragic Fire

Washington is shocked by the fire which turned an O street apartment house into an inferno early yesterday morning. In the circumstances the occupants of this remodeled structure are fortunate that only three perished and only five others injured in the holocaust. The tragedy might easily have been more appalling.

It will be scant comfort to the injured victims and others who lost their property to know that a searching investigation into the circumstances surrounding the fire has been inaugurated. No amount of rigid inspection can wipe out the tragedy of this fire or repair the damage it has done. But the community has a vital interest in this inquiry. If District officials are awake to their responsibilities, this incident should lead to the protection of other apartment house dwellers who probably live in similar danger.

The fact that the apartment became a roaring furnace within a few minutes after the blaze was discovered indicates the grave dangers that the tenants faced. Obviously the construction of living quarters with so little protection for tenants should never have been permitted. Building regulations would not now permit duplication of this ill-fated apartment house. But that does not alter the fact that structures remodeled a few decades ago, when regulations were less strict than they are now, continue to serve as living quarters.

Building Inspector Oehmann reports that the remains of the structure shows some deviation from the remodeling plans filed with his office. Indeed, it is believed that the fire may have started from an opening in a chimney which was built adjacent to closets instead of being built alongside a fireproof stair as planned. Does this mean that inspectors do not check to see whether remodeling plans are carried out as submitted to the building inspector's office?

The incident calls for a thorough investigation, not only as to the cause of the fire, but also as to the adequacy of building inspection and the extent to which unsafe structures are used for living quarters in Washington. Col. Oehmann has frequently asked for more inspectors. To what extent is this tragedy due to failure in the past to heed his appeal? The community should know the facts.

Wisconsin Weather Vane

To date the pre-convention campaigns in both of the major parties have been marked by an astonishing lack of clear-cut trends.

On the Democratic side Mr. Roosevelt's persistent refusal to state whether or not he plans to run for a third term has produced a state of political paralysis. Most of the would-be candidates for the Democratic nomination continue to mark time while awaiting the President's decision. Only two—Postmaster General Farley and Vice President Garner—have so far had the courage to brave the lightning by declaring themselves in the race regardless of what Mr. Roosevelt may do.

On the Republican side while there are no third-term complications, clarity is also lacking. Recent months have seen the emergence of three leading candidates for the G. O. P. nomination—Senator Robert A. Taft, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg and District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey. But the reaction of Republican Party voters to their respective candidacies remains undetermined.

It is not surprising, then, that all political eyes are now turned on Wisconsin. Today's primaries may not adequately or accurately reveal popular political trends in that State, much less in the Nation as a whole. It is important to remember, for instance, that there is nothing in Wisconsin law to prevent Democrats from voting in Republican primaries, Republicans from voting in the Democratic primary or Progressives from voting in either. Nonetheless, the returns should provide at least some indication of prevailing trends.

The Wisconsin primaries afford the first straight-out test of third-term sentiment. Two Democratic factions have come out with slates of delegates committed to the renomination of the President. A third slate—favoring Vice President Garner—is definitely anti-third term.

On the Republican side the balloting will serve at least as a rough measuring rod of the respective popularity of Messrs. Dewey and Vandenberg. The latter has made no active campaign in the State. But Mr. Dewey has been stumping Wisconsin in an open bid for delegates. His defeat would put a serious crimp in his campaign just as a victory would unquestionably enhance his chances for the Republican nomination.

Pointing The Moral

Coincident with indications that about 700,000 workers will have to be dropped from WPA rolls during the next three months because of limited appropriations, the A. F. of L. released estimates indicating that 10,572,000 persons were unemployed in February. Unemployment is below the January level and well below the total of February, 1939. Mr. Green is gratified that there is no sign that the gain in jobs last fall has been lost.

Nevertheless, unemployment is appallingly high—especially in view of the fact that during the closing months of 1939 we were enjoying a high degree of industrial activity. Now the peak of the upturn has been passed and for some time business has been on the downgrade. Yet the WPA is providing work for less than one-fourth of the unemployed, and planning to cut its relief rolls quite drastically.

Reports as to the need for dropping 700,000 from the WPA could hardly have come at a more strategic moment if there is harbored any hope that Congress may be moved to vote for a WPA deficiency appropriation. Undoubtedly the figures on unemployment will be used as an argument in favor of maintaining the present high enrollment of WPA workers. But a little reflection shows that what is really needed is an entirely new approach to the problem presented by the unemployed.

At no time has the WPA ever provided jobs for the great majority of work-seekers. And there is no prospect that the numbers unemployed will be reduced to a figure low enough to enable the Federal Government to make provision for all. Under the circumstances, whatever the percentage of the unemployed on WPA projects, the opposition to any cuts in expenditures, hence in jobs, will be very strong.

We should not try to minimize the difficulties of retrenchment by pretending that dismissed WPA workers will be speedily absorbed by private industry. A survey last fall to determine to what extent workers dropped from WPA rolls had found private employment was very disheartening. Within two or three months from date of dismissal over half the men were again dependent on public aid.

It is quite evident that we are making no progress whatever through the WPA toward a solution of the unemployment problem. Originally the excuse offered for this expensive system of work-relief was that it would tide us over an emergency until private industry could revive sufficiently to absorb the unemployed. Now the WPA has come to be accepted as a permanent institution, although it lacks constructive possibilities and provides inadequate relief at disproportionately great expense.

Unless we make up our minds to scrap this system it will be virtually impossible to bring down Federal relief expenditures without inflicting great hardship upon the unemployed. Realization of that fact stiffens political opposition to retrenchment.

So a system of relief that will provide more aid to the unemployed at less cost is urgently needed. That can be accomplished if we make up our minds to replace the present centralized work-relief system with decentralized agencies administered by local authorities with the aid of Federal grants. Responsibility for administering relief would thus be placed in the hands of people familiar with local needs. Under a system of grants-in-aid, moreover, these local officials would have a direct incentive to avoid wasteful expenditures.

He Won't Be Ignored

The little man upon the stair—the little man who was not there—has brought a smile to countless thousands. His mirth-provoking anonymity, his questionable existence, challenge the imagination to the degree that he becomes an almost real character.

But there is abroad in the land today another little man, once similarly nameless and once seen only as a hazy, nebulous figure, who is rapidly projecting himself into national affairs as an exceedingly potent factor and force. He is the little man who typifies what is wrong with the established economic order of things in these United States. There is nothing amusing or diverting about him, and he is altogether and even ominously real. His name is legion and he is whatever you choose to see him to be.

To some he is Unemployment, while to still many others he is an emaciated symbol of Mass Purchasing Power. To the President of the United States he is the ill-fed, ill-clad, ill-housed third of all our people. To those in Wall Street, still trying to whistle in the wind, he is Lack of Confidence. To men of genius who invented and invented until they had to invent a name for invention, he is Technocracy.

To the overly erudite he is the Imbalance of Production and Distribution. To the planners of the National Resources Committee he is the failure to make full use of our productive capacities. To one-way minds he is Monopoly, or Confiscatory Taxes, or Waste, or Extravagance, or the National Debt, or a Budget in the Red, or Economic Injustice. To the politician he is whatever the other party has done or promised to do.

Time was when this little man could be overlooked, or shrugged aside, or even ignored as merely a temporary irritant. Not so now, however. Whatever personification is ascribed to him, he is recognized as America's public enemy number one. He interferes with business, with profits, with wage earnings and salaries, with unearned incomes, with prices, credit, markets, with individual opportunity, and with the general welfare. The demand that something be done about him is become clamant.

Perhaps some day we shall tackle the problem of this little man with the deliberation, the nonpartisan purpose, the concern for the well-being of all our people and the perpetuity of our principles and institutions, the vision and the constructive intelligence, with which our forefathers worked out the charter of our political, civil, and personal liberties.

How otherwise can we expect to evolve a magna carta of economic freedom that will endure?

Problem For Democracy

The frequent expression of fears that the United States is drifting toward collectivism may be in part attributed to the approach of this year's political campaigns. But the fact that such a trend is seized upon as a campaign argument does not make it any less vital to the national welfare.

Many politicians make the mistake of charging the Administration with dictatorial motives when it takes control of functions previously left to private enterprise. The public has listened to so many accusations of this sort that it is inclined to discount any serious discussion of the growing centralization of power. So the resentment aroused by unfair attacks tends to obscure the real problem which the United States is creating for itself.

Actually it makes little difference, as H. W. Prentis, jr., president of the National Association of Manufacturers, pointed out in a radio address on Sunday night, whether we seek collectivism or stumble into it. Our chief concern is with the probable effect of a substitution of economic planning by Government agencies for private enterprise. While alleged dictatorial motives have been grossly exaggerated, the usual consequences of increasing Government controls have been given too little attention.

Mr. Prentis arrives at the reasonable conclusion that if the Government becomes responsible for the successful operation of our economic machinery, it will be forced to control opinion-forming agencies such as the press, the radio, the schools and churches. That opinion is well supported by the experience of various other countries. The American people should face the fact that individual freedom would not be compatible with Federal domination over agriculture, industry, business and labor.

The president of the N. A. M. is more successful in analyzing the dangers of this trend, however, than in prescribing counteraction. He calls upon private industry to "meet unjustified attacks with undeniable facts." He asks manufacturers to become missionaries "in behalf of the fundamental American principle that private enterprise is inseparably linked with our representative democracy and traditional civil and religious liberties."

It cannot be supposed that any preaching or missionary work on the part of industrialists will greatly affect the trend toward centralization of economic controls. Of far greater importance would be energetic leadership within this group for the elimination of unfair industrial practices and the stimulation of private enterprise by means that would enlist the full cooperation of labor. Undoubtedly some progress, as Mr. Prentis notes, has been made in this direction. But he would probably be first to admit that much remains to be done.

Beer and Skittles

From The Detroit News.

Among other things which are shrouded by the mists of antiquity is the origin of bowling. The game of skittles, its immediate ancestor, came to England from France in the fourteenth century under the name of kails. It must have been old in Holland when Peter Stuyvesant sailed to the New World, for it was in the beginning of his government in New Amsterdam that Rip Van Winkle wandered away in the Catskills and came upon a company of odd-looking personages playing at nine pins. The purely American contribution to bowling has been the tenth pin.

In skittles, associated in the common phrase with beer, the bowler stood but 21 feet from the pins, which were from 4 to 9 in number and arranged in a square with one point toward the bowler, who used a large wooden ball, about a foot in diameter and described by authorities as "not always round," a favored alibi to this day among bowlers off their stride.

Bowling is a hearty game, fitting in admirably with the German gemutlichkeit, and the mood which pervades the male night-out. Certainly it is the most amateur of our popular pastimes.

Russell Appointment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From the welter of inconsistencies that make up Dorothy Thompson's arguments in The Post of March 27, "against the attempt to destroy the professional life of a distinguished scholar," namely, Bertrand Russell, I should like to examine this one. Lord Russell, she says "has advocated that men and women find out whether they are sexually compatible before they tie up their destinies and before they have children." What does she mean "tie up their destinies?"

She says Lord Russell "has been divorced, twice I believe." How can anyone who believes in divorce and practices it be spoken of as "tying up his destiny?" And why in the name of the thing we call logic should such a person bother his head about sexual incompatibility after his "destiny is tied up" when he holds open before himself the door of divorce as an escape from this and all other marital incompatibilities?

And the phrase, "before they have children." How does Lord Russell reconcile his attitude (again I quote Dorothy Thompson) that "in all matters relating to sex the welfare of the children is the prime responsibility and the only matter of public and social importance," with his practice of divorce? Is there a sadder phenomenon in our modern civilization, one surely that is "a matter of public and social importance" than the broken home and the resultant "divorce orphan?"

There are some millions of people in the United States, and some hundreds of millions of people in the world to whom the word "adultery" is an ugly word, and is certain to remain an ugly word. That "our youth will suffer from exposure to any honest mind in the person of a man of integrity," if that "man of integrity" publicly advocates the practice of adultery, is a conviction that these hundreds of millions of people most certainly do not share with Dorothy Thompson. Census Questions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While it is logical to expect a weary citizen to protest against too much bell ringing and snooping, there is absolutely no basis for anyone to object to the census.

In spite of such apologists for big business as Dorothy Thompson and Westbrook Pegler, it has been obvious for some years that our social system was suffering from a lot of monkey wrenches thrown into the economic structure. Professional demagogues like Martin Dies and Father Coughlin believe that mass hysteria will bring the problems to a head, make matters worse, and devise means for a cure. With Congress and the press lending support to such a state of mind, it is not surprising that wise men are considered fools and rabble rousers become prophets.

Only tax evaders and criminals can find reasons to hide their personal lives from the census takers. Working men and women must welcome any attempt to solve serious problems facing America in the years of war and unemployment. With old and young citizens wandering aimlessly across the country like the "bezprizorni" of Czarist Russia, and with millions idle in our cities, both the homeless and the inadequately housed stand in need of assistance that will restore them to respectable security and independence.

We cannot attempt to solve our problems until we know the conditions under which our people live; we cannot learn these conditions by sitting by the fireside, reading Dorothy Thompson and rubbing a crystal bowl. The census is more important than British propaganda to get us into the war. The census may save us from a more dangerous war within our own borders—the civil strife born of ignorance and neglect.

Mr. Welles' Secret

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why the secrecy? What is behind Sumner Welles' trip to Europe and his very, very secret conference with Roosevelt? All this shady business makes decent people wonder. The American people rightly suspect the war moves of the Administration of "national unity"—that is, of the Rooseveltians, the Garnercrats and the Republicans.

The President insists that all talk about the Administration planning to involve the United States in war is "twaddle." Yet, if peace were the motive behind Undersecretary Welles' visit to the warring powers, why in the world doesn't Mr. Roosevelt come right out and let the American people know what is going on. Doesn't he trust us? Can he be afraid of the fact that this "unhealthy" talk of peace might start getting around and subvert people's minds?

The American men and women don't want any part in the bloody mess that is developing "over there." We want to stay "over here." Why is the President ashamed to assure us in words and action that our boys will stay over here?

Cromwell's Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: These are my reactions to the Cromwell speech:

I concede Mr. Roosevelt his right to sympathize personally with either Germany or the Allies, but in view of the determination of the American people for strict neutrality, he has no right as their public servant to make any gesture, or to allow any gesture to be made, officially to jeopardize our neutral position.

In view of his known sympathy for the Allies, and of his ill-concealed impatience at the restraint thus imposed upon him, many persons share my belief that he may be resorting to tactics calculated to arouse a war-consciousness under the official cloak of neutrality. His appointment of Mr. Cromwell to his high diplomatic position, in spite of his strong bias in favor of the Allies, and in spite of his outspokenness in voicing his leanings, bears out this hypothesis.

Mr. Roosevelt must have been well aware of his background when making the appointment. If so, his action in appointing him to this high position, for which he has demonstrated his absolute unfitness, cannot otherwise be easily explained; if he was not familiar with Mr. Cromwell's background and resulting tendencies, then Mr. Roosevelt's own fitness as an appointing official may be seriously questioned.

No doubt the speech has had the desired effect. The question has openly been raised as to whether we should not enter the war definitely as Britain's ally. Mr. Cromwell's retention in his post is evidence of Mr. Roosevelt's approval of the opinions expressed, which stamps them indisputably as the expression of his own official attitude. To be sure, Secretary Hull, who is undoubtedly sincere in his efforts to maintain the smooth and proper functioning of our diplomatic machinery, has publicly rebuked Mr. Cromwell. The latter's appointment was made by the President, hence his discharge, if made, should presumably be effected by the President; therefore, the State Department has apparently gone as far as possible in the matter.

The fact that only a public rebuke was administered is a deliberate affront to the desire of the American people for strict neutrality.

Unemployment Census

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The controversy raging over the number of unemployed in the United States emphasizes the importance of an accurate record on the subject. In 1937 when efforts were being made to secure a census of unemployment, estimates of the number of persons out of work varied about as widely as today.

To the layman interested in ascertaining the facts, there are certain questions which would seem to require an answer before dogmatic statements as to the validity or error of the various estimates can be made. Among such questions are the following:

Do the present records of the public employment offices provide a complete and accurate check on all of the employable unemployed in the country today? If not, what is still needed to assure such a check?

Was the count in 1937 a real census of the unemployed in the country at that time; or was it something else? What was the basis on which it was made?

Do the figures on unemployment given by the various agencies and experts issuing them relate only to the unemployable unemployed; or do they include persons who under ordinary conditions would not be regarded as employable? If so, is there any accurate estimate as to the number or proportion of such persons?

Are the various estimates of unemployment by the principal agencies making such estimates based on completely independent inquiries; or do all use certain data from a common source? If so, what are the common factors; and are they based on scientific estimates, assumptions or demonstrable facts?

For example, do all of the agencies in question use the same source for estimates as to the proportion of the population increase during the past ten years that should be added to the working population; or does each, by its own computation arrive independently at an identical conclusion with the others?

What factors, if, besides the declining birth rate and an increase in longevity are taken into account in computing or estimating the increase in the working population during the past decade? Were there any trends, developments, legislative or other, during that period that might have had a counterbalancing effect? If so, what were they?

Unemployment is a vitally serious problem whether the number of persons out of work is 5,000,000 or 15,000,000. It would seem, however, that one of the prime essentials in attempting to deal with the problem would be to ascertain the actual situation in so far as it is possible to do so. E. McLEAN.

"Bigger, Better Bombs"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of March 27 suggests using sheep for testing the destructive powers of the new Barlow bomb, and asks: "Could the anti-vivisectionists, for instance, properly oppose such an experiment, designed solely to test the destructive qualities of the instrument for human life?"

It strikes me that no one of humane instincts would have any hesitancy in opposing such a brutal and barbarous experiment. Instead of dismembering and disemboweling helpless sheep by exploding a powerful bomb near them, several other means might be used for such a test. I would suggest that they use boards a foot or more wide, upright and nailed to bases of wood, large enough to hold them securely in the upright position. These could be placed at varying distances from where the bomb was to be exploded, and their broad sides facing the explosion would register every result of the test desired.

Let the sheep graze in peace, and let them blow over the boards instead. H. B. BRADFORD.

The Awkward Age

Peggy is 14.

Well, I was 14 once too—not so terribly long ago, but I should have remembered a few things.

As a matter of fact we had fun together, though I was afraid that a full week-end away from school was going to be something of a strain for both of us.

I met her at the train quite late, and she looked so grown-up and chic in her dark blue suit (more like a college freshman than a high school one) that I sort of forgot the little girl aspect, and took her on to drink beer with some friends of mine. It was a very innocent party, but beer and cigarette smoke have a very sleepyfying effect on the best of us, and suddenly I looked over and there she was practically asleep at the table.

"Poor kid," Bill said.

And I thought suddenly how terribly young 14 is, even when it's dressed up with a shy amount of lipstick and plenty of self-possession. But she was rather hurt that we had noticed her dropping off, so I did not dare suggest right then that it was time to be going home.

The music started to play "Oh, Johnny, Oh!" and Peggy leaned over to me and said:

"The funniest thing happened when they played that at the dance last week. I was dancing with a boy named Johnny and—"

But somebody interrupted:

"Do you really go to dances, Peggy?"

"Of course," she answered, very good humoredly.

"In long dresses?"

"I'm no child, after all," she said. "I have two evening dresses; one is blue mousseline. That's my newest and the other—"

I had a vision of the lovely young heroines of de Musset. Surely they must have been 14 too with their stiff white dresses and their romantic dreams!

And sure enough, before I turned the light off that night, Peggy showed me a little snapshop of a smiling youth.

"I want to get a frame for it," she said, and added shyly, "He's in college!"

We went shopping the next morning. Peggy had been saving up her allowance for spring shoes, and we went around to all the shops. She wanted blue pumps, and I agreed that nothing could be prettier. I remarked that I needed pumps myself, and would probably get low heels because they were so much better for walking.

"Well, I want high heels—higher than these any way," she said, and smiled a little ruefully. "Maybe I'm at that age or something."

We found some very becoming ones, and I made no objection to her wearing them at once, even though it was raining hard. They really gave her a lot of pleasure the rest of the day, too. She kept looking down at them shyly, and catching glimpses of herself in the mirror, and at the first intermission of the matinee she said:

"Do let's go out in the lobby. I want to show off my new shoes."

I had a pang of remorse then for not having arranged an evening theater party for her, and wired her to bring the blue mousseline. So we took her to a very flossy place for supper, a French place, where there were a few people in evening dress. It was just luck though that a young actress whom we know quite well was having dinner there too. Peggy noticed her first, the long gold hair (absolutely her own), the exaggeratedly flared evening coat.

"Look," she cried, "isn't she beautiful?"

"Why it's Dare," we said. "We'll go and speak to her afterwards."

"Do you really know her?" Peggy said, wide eyed.

"Funny how her hair gets more golden every year," Bill said. "I wonder how she does it."

"Lemon rinses, she says."

And Peggy was already planning to use lemons plentifully in the weekly shampoo.

"I wonder how long it's taken her," she said thoughtfully.

The dinner was a great success. Music and oysters on the half shell completed the glamorous atmosphere that Dare had started. She declined a cigarette gracefully (delighted of course to be asked so casually by Bill) and had sherry in place of a cocktail, but it was Peggy who chose the supposedly sophisticated dishes like sweetbreads in wine sauce, and delighted the waiter by asking for a Camembert instead of dessert.

Later we dropped in on some friends, to discover they were having a party. For a while I wondered how soon we could decently leave: everyone sat around with highballs and talked about the art exhibit and then got heated up about politics, none of which meant a thing to Peggy of course.

Just as we were about to leave, some body turned on the victrola and started to dance. And from then on I wondered how we could ever tear Peggy away. She danced with everybody. She danced much better than most of us, who are more occupied with what to say and what impression we want to make than to the music. And she was just out of dancing school.

One man came up and said to me:

"It's such a relief to find an attractive girl who doesn't have to flirt to enjoy herself."

"She's is so charming," they all said.

And charming she was. The more attention she got, the more she blossomed. She told stories about school that were really funny. She knew the latest records; the last radio programs. Her very awkwardness was delightful—a little uncertain on the higher-than-usual heels, and her hands tight clenched to hide the bitten nails. The final show-down was when she asked the point of a story that everyone had laughed at except she, and it developed that no one else in the room had got the point either.

She is coming to visit us in April, and I am already planning our schedule. She said she wanted to get a permanent first, and I hope that it won't change her too much.

Fair Enough

Reply To Mr. Green

WILLIAM GREEN HAS addressed a form letter to all newspapers which publish these dispatches asking that they print a series of articles answering certain observations regarding the American Federation of Labor, particularly this one:

"The A. F. of L. is not the body of labor with a capital L at all, but a great, arrogant, corrupt, hypocritical, parasitic racket which preys on union men and persecutes nonmembers and has been getting away with many varieties and all degrees of crime, up to and including murder, for years."

I hope the papers publish Mr. Green's reply, because he has offered none in several speeches since the first of the year. I have not yet submitted my full case in support of the charge. I find new evidence every day. However, for a starter Mr. Green might go to work on the facts which I have published already, showing that certain charters issued by the American Federation of Labor are used by criminals to extort money from both workers and employers, that an American Mafia has been created by associate members of the old Capone mob in cooperation with New York and Brooklyn racketeers under the auspices of the A. F. of L. and that men convicted of crimes against the peace and against the rank and file of Labor with a capital L are permitted to hold office in A. F. of L. unions.

AS TO MURDER, the record is very bad, and while it is not alleged that the national body, as such, ever ordered or committed a murder, nevertheless, the national body is accountable for murders done in the course of disputes among and between subsidiary unions. The parent body cannot disown its children. Mr. Green attempts to shirk this responsibility, but if he is permitted to get away with that, then obviously the rank and file members will be abandoned to the wolves within the labor movement.

I know Mr. Green only by his record and his statements. When I did try to interview him in Washington on the matter of Willie Bioff, the Capone hoodlum and vice-monger who runs the labor racket of the amusement industry, his press officer said it was useless to arrange a meeting, because the subject was beyond Mr. Green's authority. I cite this incident to show that the national headquarters of the A. F. of L. refused the opportunity to be heard.

Mr. Green has taken a hurt attitude and has even insinuated that I am under some secret subsidy fro... some organization to destroy the A. F. of L. I have invited him to present evidence as to that, but he hasn't done so, nor has he at any time discussed the facts which I have put forward, except to complain that it is unkind to bring up such matters.

But I may have given an impression of hostility to the A. F. of L. as such, and I would like to make myself clear on that.

I AM NOT hostile to the A. F. of L. or any of its component unions, and I am much more sympathetic with the underpaid and oppressed rank and file than many of the union officials are. But I hate criminals and grafters, and I should think that Mr. Green and the A. F. of L. would hate them, too, particularly when they are discovered in the labor movement, thieving from the workers and selling them out to the employers, disgracing the A. F. of L. and destroying the prestige and strength of organized labor.

I may be naive, but if I were president of the A. F. of L. I would find somewhere in the constitution legal authority to disown and throw out of the movement not only Willie Bioff and George Scalise, the convicted vice-mongers who never were workers and always have been racketeers, but certain distinguished grafters in the higher positions who have grown rich by exploiting their connection with labor and who are employers themselves. I would also throw out George Browne, the president of the labor racket of the amusement industry, for appointing as his personal representatives two infamous Chicago criminals, Bioff and Nick Circella, and for obvious general unfitness. I would not wait for reporters or public prosecutors to delouse my organization, but, out of devotion to the A. F. of L. and its good name and in the interests of the rank and file, I would raise pluperfect hell until all criminals and grafters were driven out. And I would be on my toes constantly to keep such vermin out. I am beginning to believe that I am actually more sympathetic with the A. F. of L. in its intended form and character and with the rank and file than Mr. Green is himself.

Living In Africa

WHEN BILL, their first child, was born, there were no other white people within two days' journey of Wema, the central Congo missionary station where Dr. W. E. Davis, author of "Ten Years in the Congo" (Reynal & Hitchcock, $2.50), and his wife made their headquarters. And Bill had barely begun to squawl when the doctor was called across the river to amputate a black chief's leg, leaving his wife in charge of a native boy with filed teeth and a tattooed face. That was the kind of practice Dr. Davis had.

He had wanted adventure in strange places, and he found it. In college, out in the State of Washington, he had dreamed of working his way around the world; he took to missionary work, and passed five years in medical school, apparently, primarily to realize that dream. Incidentally, he met in missionary college the girl who was to be his wife; choosing her, he also chose Africa. Why they ever left Africa, this book does not make clear, though a footnote places their present residence in Bourbon County, Ky. The doctor writes as though, among mere Americans, he was a bit homesick for exotic Africa.

His work was in a land of swampy jungle, where men still lived who had seen Stanley, and where Stanley's Darkest Africa was little changed. Sometimes, following narrow footpaths among the trees from one village to another, the doctor felt that perhaps when Roman roads were new those trails had been old. This was a prehistoric world, without a written history; his patients were bow-and-arrow men. He came to love them; they respected him, because he seemed to them a great magician.

The hypodermic needle was his greatest magic, for that was a land infested with yaws, and neosalvarsan seemed even to a Western-trained doctor to work something very like miracles. Often Dr. Davis made more than two hundred injections of neosalvarsan in a day. He performed other miracles as well; once he cut an eighty-pound tumor out of a 170-pound patient, and the ninety-pound remnant survived.

Of native witch doctors Dr. Davis has a low opinion, though he is willing to believe that they can kill by the power of fear. For the Congolese are a fear-ridden people; he saw how hysteria could arrest the process of recovery in a patient, who came to believe that a curse had been put upon him or her. He learned that it was dangerous to operate upon any one who had a guilty conscience; the patient was likely to become obsessed with the idea that the one he had wronged was using witchcraft against him, and would develop the weirdest neuroses.

FOR OTHER NATIVE crafts which seemed sheer magic the doctor acquired the keenest respect; for drumming, for instance. The language of the Congo drum, he says, is something more than a Morse code. It imitates in sound and rhythm the effect of the human voice. Every native child learns the language of the drum early as he learns to speak. One night when the doctor was talking with the natives in his own house they suddenly paused, listened intently, then told him that the chief of a native village 20 miles away had died. "We have just heard it on the drum," they said. He listened; his Western ears could not catch a sound. If a villager he wanted to see was off in the forest, some other villager would "call him on the drum," and soon he would appear.

Ten years is a long time in the Congo. Dr. Smith came home in 1937. He writes of his African decade—his friendships, miseries, triumphs and routine—as "the most interesting years" of his life, with an undramatized affection that is convincing and satisfying.

Peace Must Be Won

What The French Say

Paris, (By Mail).

"APRES LA GUERRE, il faut gagner la paix" is a maxim today in Paris, "After the war, peace must be won." There is the conviction, moreover, that peace must be conquered through a new idea.

Ideas are emerging with every day of war. There is fresh talk of a "United States of Europe," or new crowned heads and confederations. Some think a new European Federalism may be gained through an extension of the proposed Danubian Federation on the one hand and, on the other, a closely economic and political union of France and Great Britain.

"SMASH HITLER!" is no longer the dominant war aim of France. Frenchmen no longer admit a distinction between a good and bad Germany, i. e., between the German people and the regime. No Frenchman can now be persuaded that his enemies have been merely individuals like Bismarck, Kaiser Wilhelm and Hitler. The French regard the present Nazi regime as nothing more than the extreme and revolutionary expression of tendencies which have long been dominant in Pan-Germanism and Prussianism. Frenchmen are bent on destroying these tendencies, sheering away from what they feel to be a dangerous illusion: that Hitler would not immediately be supplanted by the ancient and ambitious Prussian army.

On this point, the French are pretty well in agreement. Differences of opinion begin to appear when Frenchmen discuss measures to prevent future German aggression. Extremists are waging a violent campaign to partition Germany and to reestablish the states which formerly composed it. Even those who do not believe in German partition are opposed to leaving a German colossus in middle Europe after the peace. They insist that viable frontiers be given to Czecho-Slovakia, that the new Poland be given really free access to the sea. [Deletion by censor.]

Economic problems arise when it is agreed that there must be an equilibrium of forces in Europe. The much-maligned Versailles Treaty is upheld as a just document in its territorial adjustment. But—politically and, especially, economically—the Versailles Treaty was admittedly a consummate flop.

Could a partitioned Germany, ringed by weak states, survive and flourish economically? Could the ancient Austro-Hungarian Empire solve the economic ills of the Danube basin? Opinion here answers No to both questions.

A DANUBIAN confederation then? This is an idea which is receiving vast attention in Europe today. This federation, [deletion by censor] should include Austria, which must be separated again from Germany.

After the last war and the making of the peace, the Balkan-Danubian area was thrown into a profound depression, from which it never fully emerged. It is argued that Hitler's coups were thus facilitated and France was faced once more with war.

The Danubian confederation promises economic unification, perhaps constitutes a means of solving the problem of nationalities in middle Europe. Its partisans argue that these minority groups will cease to be a seat of trouble only when placed within the framework of a politico-economic statute, safeguarding both the economic unity of the Danubian-Balkan territory and the cultural autonomy of the nationalities which—whether they like it or not—are obliged to coexist and to cooperate.

THERE IS THUS a possible nucleus of a new order, after the peace, in Middle Europe—with a potential, ready-made ruler. No man can say how this picture may be altered as the war goes on, with increasing velocity and accumulating bitterness.

Yet in all the dreadful uncertainty of a warring Europe there are men, groups of men and women—so-called "governments in exile"—working steadily today toward a new order for their peoples in a new and peaceful Europe in the future. Some of these actually are governments. [Deletion by censor.] Others are merely homeless but hopeful aliens thinking and talking of organization, dreaming of new freedom. Their actual centers are sometimes Switzerland—or the United States [deletion by censor.]—Austrians, Bavarians, Ukranians, Poles, Czechs—fighting with the Allies against a common enemy and working and waiting for their own place in the new Europe.

Norway And Sweden

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Copenhagen

IF YOU GLANCE at a map, the very configuration of the two states on the Scandinavian Peninsula suggests Siamese twins; two bodies, one with its face turned to the east and south, the other looking westward; two hearts, beating separately and yet in unison; two minds, kindred and yet diverse; two individual beings, each with its own constitution, language, temper, outlook and traditions, still anyone can see they are sisters—or rather Siamese twins, for nature has indissolubly attached their backs to one another.

This is one way of looking at the map of Northern Europe; it is restrictive because it concedes the essential unity of the Scandinavian Peninsula, but fails to take into account the two remaining elements of the north; Denmark and Finland. Another more comprehensive view, which is—or has been—most popular among military men, conceives the north as a citadel where Sweden and Norway would represent the main works, while Denmark and Finland form the bastions.

Then, there is a third simile which used to have official favor because it is the most peaceful and noncommital of the three. The north, these people would say, is neither a union nor an entente, but "a quartet playing in perfect unison without a conductor." In human terms, the quartet is, or rather was, the four foreign ministers of Denmark, Finland, Norway, Sweden meeting twice a year to discuss common interests and, if possible concert parallel (but never combined) policies.

HAS ANY of these pleasant figurative conceptions of the north a chance of surviving the present hard test of reality? I doubt it. The "citadel" has already fallen. The moment the eastern bastion was attacked in earnest, main works and southern bastion declared their neutrality and left the assailed part of this strange fortress to fight it out as best it could. (In saying so, I intend no reflection upon the generous assistance that had been privately given to the Finns by their neighbors and others, but there is no questioning the fact that the three Scandinavian states declared and maintained their neutrality throughout).

As for the "perfect quartet," well, it simply and speedily shrank into a trio, but otherwise the performance goes on. At the last two meetings of the Scandinavian foreign ministers—on December 7 at Oslo and on February 24 at Copenhagen—the Finnish representative was conspicuously absent. Whether this was due to the "urgency of affairs at home," as the official version would have it, or it denoted that the three neutral statemen would have found the presence of their belligerent colleague a bit too embarrassing—the fact stands that there is only a trio left. And no one knows whether tomorrow it will further decrease into a duo, or a solo, or no performance at all.

Now, what of the "Siamese twins?" Does this simile still hold good? That is a question still in issue.

A few weeks ago, the former Swedish foreign minister, Rickard Sandler—who has become, after his resignation last December, the leading spokesman of the so-called "Finland activists" in Sweden—raised the problem of Swedish-Norwegian military cooperation afresh in a stirring address to the students of Oslo University. In the eyes of Herr Sandler, the problem which most immediately and most urgently calls for such cooperation is the defense of the so-called "Fenno-Scandian callotte." This term which has come more and more into use, of late years, applies to the northernmost regions of Norway, Sweden and Finland viewed as a whole. Indeed, they do form a whole, geographically, ethnically, strategically, and they have a common name—Lapland, which extends across the frontiers like a cap covering three heads.

IN THIS SPEECH, Sandler expressed an apprehension that is today widely held throughout Scandinavia—that the Russian offensive against Finland ultimately aims much farther than at subduing that country, or wringing concessions from it. What the Soviets really are after, say these people, is control of the ice-free North Atlantic seaboard, from the Varangerfjord to Narvik, or even farther south; they may now temporarily call a halt, after the conquest (or the subjection) of Finland, but ultimately the Russians are sure to drive on to the coast. That would not only bring a number of valuable ice-free harbors in the Far North into the hands of the Soviet-Nazi entente, but at the same time mean control of the Swedish iron-ore mines around Kiruna and Gallivare, and the Norwegian deposits of Kirkenes.

Thus the slogan, "Sweden and Norway are in the same boat," which is now more and more doubling, if not displacing, that other famous slogan, "Finland's cause is ours" unquestionably has a certain plausibility about it, but in the end it may well turn out to be as empty and delusive.

More than the Swedish papers, the press of Norway is split on the issue whether the two countries really are "in the same boat." The line-up, incidentally, is rather peculiar. A well-known independent liberal paper, Tidens Tegn, rallied wholeheartedly behind Sandler's proposals, which logically must end in a Swedish-Norwegian military alliance, while another liberal organ, Dagbladet—which, it is true, is much more to the left than the first named—emphatically rejected the idea. On the other hand, the principal conservative organ, Aftenposten, and labor's chief organ, Arbeiderbladet, which used to be almost every day at loggerheads over something or other, pursue much the same line in this matter, both moving warily, but steadily, towards the alliance camp.

IF RUSSIA alone were in the issue, the outcome of the present tussle pro and con a military alliance would not be dubious. Nearly all Scandinavian military experts are confident that Sweden and Norway would be able jointly to fight the Russians off, especially as long as Finland has not been overrun. The snag in the alliance scheme is Germany. Recent events have tended to bear out what many observers on the spot have sensed for a long time: that Sweden, mutatis mutandis, is playing today her old game of 1914-1918 all over again. Sweden wants to be neutral, of course, and she will not depart from this stand of her own free will; but, if forced to the wall by ineluctable events, her choice, in all probability, will be not on any account to fight Germany. Whether this is due to the deep-grained German sympathies in influential political, military and before all business circles, which have not been sensibly affected even by the latest turn of Nazi policies, or Sweden simply cannot afford to fight Germany, whatever happens, the trend is too evident to be overlooked without risk of grave disillusion.

NORWAY, on her side, surely cannot fight Britain. Even though popular sympathies were not as clearly with the Allies, as they undoubtedly are, this would be an axiom too self-evident to require further explanation. A country with a coastline as long-stretched and vulnerable as Norway's, with the fourth biggest merchant marine in the world and no navy to speak of surely cannot afford to wage war with the world's foremost naval power—least of all from such close quarters.

But the point is not only that Norway cannot afford to antagonize Britain—she has no other country to look to for effective aid against aggression. So, if the worst came to the worst, Norway, although she certainly wants as much as Sweden to stay neutral as long as it is humanly possible (her recent resistance against the passage of the Allied troops to Finland bears out that point), would doubtless follow her great poet, Bjornstjerne Bjornson, who wrote about Britain: "Vi vil rope ditover i vor hojeste nod" (in our deepest distress, we shall call over to you).

Sweden looks east and south, Norway looks west. If they are in the same boat, it will make difficult sailing. At the time when the two countries were still united under the same crown (up to 1905) Norwegian cartoonists used to picture the king as standing with one leg in each of two boats steering apart on a stormy sea. Dagbladet recently reminded us of this and concluded:

"Nature has not predestined Sweden and Norway to be in the same boat—with its keel upwards!"

("Dr. Robert Ley, head of the Nazi Labor Front, declared in his speech that war is 'a blessing of God.' 'It is an expression of the highest and best in mankind,' he said. 'Constant peace is a curse under which manhood dries up.'" —News item.)

I

War's a lovely blessing—
Peace, my lads, is not;
Slaughter's not distressing—
Get it while it's hot!
Life is dull without it,
Empty without strife;
Wake and be about it!
Boy, is this the life!

II

See the bombers dropping Bomb wher'er they will;
Hear the rifles popping—
Isn't it a thrill?
Things that stir a Nazi
Are the torn and blind;
They are hotsy-totsy
In the Nazi mind.

III

Watch the armies marching—
Watch the bombers fly!
It is great for starching
Character, oh my!
Shattered homesteads blazing—
Refugees at bay
These are things worth praising;
Through the night and day.

IV

Do you hate your neighbor?
That's the spirit, boys!
Carve him with a saber—
Know the manly joys!
Keep the big guns roaring!
Mercy always ban!
Then will you be soaring
Upward as a man!

V

Lists of dead and dying,
Curling pools of blood,
Little children crying,
Bodies in the mud;
These should thrill a nation—
Make it feel its best,
Fill it with elation

VI.

Slaughter's noble, truly,
In the highest sense;
Maddened and unruly
Natures are immense;
Forward then to battle!
It's a blessing great . . .
Me join in? . . . Well, that'll
Simply have to WAIT!

The State of New York has refused to accept the late Samuel Untermyer's bequest of his estate Greystone to the State as a public park. Can you remember away back when a millionaire could leave his property to the people if he was that generous?

Rockefeller Center is completed after 12 years, at a cost of $100,000,000. And it puts to shame those of us who were saying back around 1931: "It'll never go through," and "It was good idea before the crash, but Rockefeller is stuck with it."

England and France have agreed not to make a separate peace. Now if they will only get together on the matter of not getting into separate wars.

Hi! Straighten me out; Last summer, every time I went to my broker for advice on the market he said, "We think so-and-so, but of course if war breaks out in Europe the market will have a big break." Now whenever I drop in he says, "We think so and so, but you've got to understand that if peace comes there will be a terrific slump.

—Puzzled Pete.

The U. S. And Peace

By Mark Sullivan

The President's Changing Attitude

ABOUT POSSIBLE peace in Europe, about America's relation to such peace, about its effect on our politics and in other respects—about all that we are at a dividing point. We see the closing of the door on one phase, the opening of another.

What makes the present a dividing point is the trip of Undersecretary of State Welles to Europe. Mr. Welles went, he talked with the statesmen of the countries involved, he returned. He reported to President Roosevelt. The next day Mr. Roosevelt gave out a statement. There was, Mr. Roosevelt said, "scant immediate prospect for peace." Almost plaintively, wistfully, Mr. Roosevelt said, "scant immediate prospect for peace." Almost plaintively, wistfully, Mr. Roosevelt added some vague words about "when the time comes" for peace.

For understanding where we now are, go back to the beginning. Before the war started, during a period beginning in October, 1937, the period when the situation in Europe was in the stage of bullying the dictators and appeasement by the democracies—during that period, Mr. Roosevelt made on the country an impression of being rather too restlessly willing to take a hand. During nearly two years, Mr. Roosevelt took steps and made statements which cumulatively disquieted the country—his suggestion of a quarantine of aggressors; his phrase, "if we don't have war"; his indorsement of a rather aggressive editorial on foreign relations in The Washington Post as his own policy. Mr. Roosevelt seemed disposed to take a part in the European situation, seemed willing to cooperate with the democracies in resisting the dictatorships—so long as the resistance was limited to, in Mr. Roosevelt's own phrase, methods "short of war."

WITH THE OPENING of actual war, September 1, 1939, this rather aggressive attitude of Mr. Roosevelt ceased. From seeming impatient, almost impetuous, he became restrained, subdued. From September on, Mr. Roosevelt's attitude was the attitude of the country, a settled policy of avoiding military participation in the war.

Then, beginning about January 1 last, Mr. Roosevelt began to think of Europe, not in terms of the war but in terms of possible peace. As in the pre-war period, he seemed disposed to have a hand in the diplomatic wrangling, so now he seemed eager to have a hand in the peace; if he could, to hurry the peace.

This recent attitude of Mr. Roosevelt was described, during last January, by Mr. Ernest K. Lindley, commonly believed to be familiar with the President's mind at that time:

"The President's mind is dwelling on the possibility of an appeal for peace in Europe. . . . 'His mind is filled with affairs abroad.' If a suitable opening presents itself, the President's attempt at intercession will probably come before March. . . . Beyond doubt the President would like to have a hand, probably the controlling hand, in a European peace settlement. He would regard it as the crowning achievement of his years as President."

In this mood the President took many steps. He sent Undersecretary Welles on his European trip. He sent Mr. Myron C. Taylor as his "personal representative" to the Vatican. He set various experts and "idea men" working on ideas to be presented at a peace conference if one should come about. That all this was laudable hardly needs saying. It would be unthinkable that the strongest nation in the world should not accept some share of responsibility for the world's peace. Mr. Roosevelt, in groping for an opening for peace, was doing what his position called for.

THIS IS THE chapter, to the end of which we have now, apparently, come. If Mr. Roosevelt had any hope of early intercession, that hope disappeared when Mr. Welles reported to him last week. There seems little likelihood of peace during the ten months remaining of Mr. Roosevelt's term.

During the period of the President's preoccupation with peace, some of his more zealous intimates coupled peace with the notion of a third term. Possibly unfortunately, and possibly without Mr. Roosevelt's assent, they put out a theory which ran somewhat as follows:

If Mr. Roosevelt could get a project of peace started, and if it should be under way at the time of the Democratic convention in July, and at the time of the election in November, then it would be desirable, indeed imperative, to keep Mr. Roosevelt in office, so as not to interrupt his mechanism for peace. As it was frequently put by New Dealers: If Mr. Roosevelt were in the midst of bringing about peace, that condition would be an emergency—which would call on Mr. Roosevelt to run again, and on the country to elect him.

Not all would agree with the New Dealers' thesis. Not all would say that the approach of a peace conference between warring nations in Europe would be a sufficient reason for the United States to depart from its two-term tradition. But this was the theory and the hope that the New Dealers had—that any approach of peace would be regarded as an emergency justifying Mr. Roosevelt in trying for a third term.

So far as peace seems deferred, so is this envisaged emergency deferred. But if this reason, or excuse, for a third term seems unlikely, doubtless there will be no lack of other reasons. The third term zealots start, not with a reason but with a wish. Their wish is a third term. Once the wish exists, reasons to support it are easy to find, or devise.

Apartment Fire Kills Three

1. SMOKE pours from the four-alarm fire in the apartment building, 2131 O street northwest. Three died in the early morning blaze yesterday and five were injured

2. A RESIDENT, Edwin Schubert, had little difficulty in escaping the fire as he lived in a first-floor apartment. From the police line he watched through field glasses as flames licked the building

3. HELPLESS to save their belongings, but thankful to have escaped with their lives, Mrs. John Appelt and her niece, Ruth Avery, watch fighters battle the fire. Mrs. Appelt's apartment was on the third floor

4. CHARRED LAW BOOKS were about the only things not in ashes in the apartment of Mildred Kanges, graduate of the Washington College of Law. Michael H. Jones (inset) died in Emergency Hospital from injuries received when he fell while escaping the flames from his third-floor apartment

Not all is gold that glitters. This brilliant costume, made entirely of paper, will represent the metals industry at the sesquicentennial dinner celebrating the establishment of the American patent system, to be held in Washington of April 10. The skirt is made of diamond-shaped segments of gold, copper, brass and aluminum paper. Bodice: Aluminum scales. Hat: More glittery paper

Pages for the book of fashion. This young lady will represent the publishing industry at the dinner celebrating the establishment of the American patent system. The skirt is made of pages of newspapers, magazines and books. The universality of the printing art is represented by the map of the world on the bodice. Hat: A coronet of playing cards. Not recommended for a rainy night

She could make good on a threat to eat her hat—it's made of twists of spaghetti. This girl in taffeta gown with bouffant skirt encircled with a string of tin cans filled with edibles will represent the food industry at the sesquicentennial dinner celebrating George Washington's signing the first American patent law. A sheaf of wheat rises out of the bodice. Leading scientists, inventors and industrialists will applaud her appearance in the Mayflower Hotel

Just the thing for the self-effacing Hollywood star. A simple green crepe dress touched up with a few dozen photographs and a flame-colored cape lined with chartreuse form the foundation of this costume. Attach innumerable strips of moving picture film to the collar of the cape (about 2,000 feet will do it nicely), and top it off with a camera bellows for a hat. This costume will represent the motion picture industry

With hip boots, galoshes and rubbers, a group of District and WPA officials went for a mile-and-a-half walk yesterday—through a sewer. They dropped through a manhole at Bolling Field, disappeared for nearly an hour, then reappeared from another manhole some 7,000 feet away and announced it was a very nice sewer. Maj. Patrick H. Tansey, acting Engineer Commissioner, led the party. It was the final inspection of a new WPA project designed to improve Washington's refuse disposal facilities, costing $425,000. A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 1.

NEVER think that all our beauteous models are members of the Stork Club Set. The gorgeous photographic jobs like Anita Colby and the rest do "piece work" as hired, and their well-known faces are often seen in the smart supper clubs, escorted by well dressed and heeled young men.

But over in our fabulous garment center, that stretch of Seventh avenue in the thirties and forties, hundreds of other models toil, many of them as beautiful and able as the uptown girl. The other day I went over there to view the summer line of my old pal, Charlie Nudelman, for whom Clare Potter does her magic in sports clothes, and was reminded again that Charlie's ace model, Corinne, is just about the best clothes displayer in the field. She's a bright, blazing blonde, with a magnificent slender figure which she carries well. And she has been with Charlie for nine years.

ALICE HUGHES

Many models prefer working for these high-class garment houses, getting paid regularly if they are on the year-round basis. Charlie's two other regulars at present are Lorraine and Estelle, both excellent at the work. They get $35 or $40 a week, rain or shine. Single girls in the garment center can take fashion show jobs of an evening, too, and boost the income, but modeling jobs on Seventh are highly popular with married girls, whose husbands quite properly want them home evenings. Corinne herself married a young Jersey barrister three years ago, and now confines her appearances to the daily round. The best of these girls are as gorgeous as the Uptown Gang, in which Muriel Maxwell is now being rushed by cameramen.

Pinocchio Prints

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor

Hollywood's feature films have had far-flung influences on fashions recently, not the least of them being Walt Disney's animated stars, Snow White and the Dwarfs. Now with the beguiling Pinocchio on the screen, both the younger and older generations will be captivated over the fashions that have sprung up as a result. Here are two film players wearing Pinocchio prints fresh off their rollers, Phyllis Brooks at right, Linda Hayes, above. At right is Cleo, the glamorous goldfish who made her coquettish screen debut in the Disney multiplane film, and who makes her debut as a style entity. Cleo is red gold swimming in a dark blue sea of crepe. The butcher boy blouse (above) displays tiny printed portraits of Pinocchio with a flowering branch which sprouted where his nose should have been when he told a lie

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man in Love Is Told by Outspoken Girl That His Sweetheart Has "Mother Complex;" He's Worried

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For several months I have been keeping company with a girl I met at the church to which I belong. For a while we went together only occasionally, but now I find that we are becoming seriously interested in each other. Her background seems to be very similar to mine and, all in all, I find her to be a wholesome, square-shooting young lady. (Aside, I might add that I am 29 and she is around 24.)

About a week ago, one of our mutual friends, a girl who is noted in in the community for her outspokenness, told me that she admired my girl a great deal, but feels sorry for her. She said her trouble was, "a mother complex;" that every time she (my informant) suggested some activity to my girl, she was obliged to decline because "her mother was not feeling well." The inference was that "mother" became indisposed just to furnish an excuse for daughter to stay home. In other words, my girl's mother is so glad to have her daughter with her that she stands in the way of the daughter's leading her own life.

Because I have heard a great deal about the poor matrimonial risk of a man who is tied to his mother's apron strings, I would like to know if the risk applies equally to girls who are similarly dominated. And also, whether this girl's situation, as described, amounts to "mother domination." I might add that I question, seriously, the authenticity of the information given, as I have never had any difficulty in getting dates (or keeping them after they were once made) with this girl. Her family relationships appear to be normal and wholesome, so far as I can see. Also, the girl apparently has broken her home ties before, because she went to a college several hundred miles away, for four years.

Any thought of marriage in my case is out of the question for the immediate future, due to economic factors; but I would greatly appreciate your appraisal of the situation, even so. Yours very truly. CURIOUS.

Informant Is Busybody, Deserving Curt Dismissal

DEAR CURIOUS: In my opinion, your outspoken informant is not very quick on the trigger when it comes to reading nuances aright. It seems pretty plain to me that your "girl" (for reasons of her own that one can readily indorse) just doesn't care to make a boon companion of our Miss Busybody. And so she takes refuge behind the standing "social lie" about her mother's indisposition, as the most tactful, unanswerable excuse for turning down Miss B's invitations.

Your "girl" probably has a better faculty for reading the motives back of actions, than has Miss B. She probably senses (while having the good taste not to mention) that Miss B's motive for wanting to cultivate her aquaintance is jealous curiosity concerning your courtship. Apparently Miss B wants to know all there is to know about what goes on in the lives of her neighbors; and perhaps she has a special interest in your direction, an interest of a kind that prompts her to try to break up the courtship, with the idea of establishing herself in the place which your "girl" now occupies in your affections.

I am glad that you have the good judgment to doubt the thenticity" of your informant's inferential deductions; and sorry (for your girl's sake) that you suffered Miss B to talk herself out on the subject. Her meanly intended, far-fetched insinuations were such as to merit curt dismissal on the spot. In my opinion, she has permanently disqualified herself for the title of "friend" of either you or your girl. M. H.

What Is Formal Dress For June Wedding?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you please tell me what would be correct formal attire for the bridegroom and ushers at an 8 o'clock evening church wedding in June? PUZZLED.

DEAR PUZZLED: In tropical climes—and Washington in summer must definitely be classified as "tropical" in temperature—men may wear white suits as an alternative to the traditional "tails," when dressing to participate in a formal June wedding, solemnized in church at 8 o'clock in the evening. If the weather man predicts cold evenings for the month of June, tails would be the better choice for men in your wedding party. If the weather is sultry, double-breasted white suits would be preferable. (I say "double-breasted" because this type of coat is considered more formal than the sack-suit or single closing style.)

Miss Haworth will be gald to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The Gentler Sex

'Who's Calling, Please?'

Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, nonstop crusader, has now taken the telephone situation in hand.

At her press conference yesterday the indefatigable founder and president of the Do Something About It League announced she would immediately seek legislation requiring licenses for all users of telephones.

Mrs. DeGoofey

"We license drivers of motor cars," she declared, "and yet lay ourselves open to the annoyances of all the millions of nitwit telephone users."

"How do you define a 'nitwit telephone user,' Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a former copy reader.

"Anyone who calls at the time you would logically be supposed to be dining, bathing or sleeping; anyone who leaves a number for you to call without leaving a name; anyone who talks so long your arm gets cramped holding the receiver; anyone who indulges in long pauses in conversation and yet doesn't hang up; anyone who remarks, on calling at 10, 11 or even noon, 'I hope I didn't get you out of bed;' anyone who has a secretary or other underling get you on the telephone and then keeps you waiting interminably on his or her pleasure for the conversation to begin; anyone who—oh, it would take me forever to enumerate all these pests!"

Stuffed Shirts Also to Blame

"But Mrs. DeGoofey," protested a society reporter, "What about the objectionable persons on the other end of the line—that is the persons called?"

"I'm glad you brought that up. I certainly intend to bring down to earth some of those stuffed shirts who answer—or rather don't answer—telephones. For instance, there is the inflated nobody who always must know just who is calling before she will talk—even is she has to disguise her own voice to inquire. Then there is the woman who is eternally 'resting' or reading or wandering in the garden when wanted on the telephone and yet who complains if she doesn't get her message.

"I also intend to do something about the hostess who keeps her telephone concealed in a doll or other fancy gimcrack. Also, I think it is high time—especially with the club banquet and fete season arriving—that a telephone day bed equipped with a mechanical device to hold the receiver be designed. Such an arrangement would enable chairmen of committees to talk endlessly throughout the day without fatigue."

"Don't you intend to do anything about telephone diction?" asked a charm columnist.

"Heavens no! We have too much telephone diction already. One of the worst telephone pests at large is the woman with the telephone voice. Now in my licensing system for telephone users, I shall require that every woman be required to listen to herself at the telephone.

'Guess Who' Pests To Be Banned

"Another thing, I intend to make it a felony for anyone to call on the phone and say, 'Guess who this is?' Such impertinence is exceeded only by that of the caller who asks 'Who is this?' of the person answering the phone.

"I also expect to do something about persons who have their photographs taken at telephones especially women executives who in their desk poses at the phone are as objectionable as would-be literary men with pipes."

"Perhaps it would be simpler to abolish the telephone," suggested an editor of a "Fifty Years Ago Today" column.

"No, indeed," replied Mrs. DeGoofey. "The telephone has its uses. For instance, it is one of the planks in the platform of the Do Something About It League that no visitor ever pay an impromptu call at a home or an office without first telephoning a warning. Another one of our planks is that out-of-town visitors arriving by motor car, telephone at the first filling station on the outskirts of the city. No, it is not he telephone that is at fault—but rather its abuse by upstarts and stuffed shirts—"

"Mrs. DeGoofey, you are wanted on the telephone," interrupted a messenger.

"Oh, excuse me please—no, wait—Find out just who is calling."

Good Figure Aid to Graceful Dancing

Marek Weber Advises Simpler Steps to Relieve Body Tension

By Ida Jean Kain

IMAGINE being able to tell by a glance at a woman's figure whether or not she is a good dancer and even how often she goes dancing!

Preposterous as this sounds at first, Marek Weber, the Viennese waltz king, has a very plausible explanation for this claim. From his observations of women on the dance floors that dot the globe, he believes it is a law of probability that good dancing goes with a lovely figure and a gracefully erect carriage, and that the good dancers are women who like to dance and average two or three nights a week at it.

Good Posture Is Big Factor

See? It's as simple as that. But we'll string along with Mr. Weber a little further. His ideas are interesting and they may suggest a new approach to exercise. As he points out, to dance well a woman has to stand up.

Unless she holds herself erect, she is heavy on her feet and her partner soon tires of dragging her weight around. Thus good posture is a main factor in dancing. But, more important, proper carriage not only tends to minimize figure faluts but to eradicate them!

Relaxation also enters the picture at this point. A woman must hold herself erect without being stiff. If she is rigid, her partner can't manage her. "On the dance floor, relaxation seems to be almost automatic," Mr. Weber says. "One must be completely at ease to dance well and this appears to be the first requisite for priming one's body for grace and poise. Once the body becomes supple, it is easily bent to the will—especially the will to reduce."

Surprising Similarity

Then, finally, there is the exercise angle. Some of the more spectacular dance steps pass for strenuous exercise. There is a surprising similarity between the ups-and-downs that constitute a set of calisthenics and the more complicated dance steps.

The conga and rumba afford plenty of action for the arm, shoulder and waist muscles. The tango involves so many deep-knee dips, backward kicks and partial back-bends that it might almost be classed as streamlining exercise for the midsection.

It is Mr. Weber's belief, however, that dancing should be started with the waltz. Waltzing releases tension from muscles and never centers and the rhythm eases you into the mood for a more acitve performance.

Dancing Before Mirror

With or without a partner, you can dance for exercises—and fun. Turn on the radio or phonograph and try out every possible step. If there's a convenient mirror, do your dancing before it so that you may watch yourself.

Here is a beneficial bit of "trimming" to combine with your dance solitaire—take a chiffon scarf in both hands and raise arms high overhead. As you dance, let the uplifted arms sway exaggeratedly from side to side. This Salome stuff not only adds grace but it stretches the muscles, improving the circulation and encouraging the deep breathing that is essential to health. Try dancing backward for accent on posture.

Stuffed Spareribs

A Budget and Taste Winner

IF YOU'RE hankering after a new idea for the main part of the meal, try stuffed spareribs with fruit. This dish is not only a winner but is one to help out the budget, for fresh pork cuts remain low in price because of large supplies. Here's the process for turning out this thrifty and delicious dish.

Spareribs Stuffed with Fruit—Wipe two sides of uncracked spareribs and season with salt and pepper. Combine ½ pound of chopped raw prunes, 4 chopped apples and 1 teaspoon salt. Spread on one side of spareribs and cover with the other. Skewer or tie together. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degress, for 1½ hours. Thicken the pork sweet juices for gravy.

Baked potatoes and an ingratiating casserole of cauliflower with a tomato sauce and grated cheese will blend into this meal. A green salad with scallions included to give a flavor tone and spiced dressing, a hot bread and a light dessert and plenty of steaming hot coffee will leave nothing to be desired.

Welcome Mat Rolls Out For Sir Stafford Cripps

Member of Parliament and Former British Solicitor General Will Arrive Today For Talks on Chinese Cooperatives

By Hope Ridings Miller

SIR STAFFORD CRIPPS, member of Parliament and former British solicitor general, who will arrive in Washington by plane early this morning, will be widely feted during his week's visit here. Coming from San Francisco, where he stopped briefly after a trip by trans-Pacific Clipper from wartorn China, he will be a guest at the British Embassy during his Washington stay.

Sir Stafford will spend two weeks in this country before returning to England. An independent labor member of the House of Commons, he set out for the Orient sometime ago and only recently ended his fact-finding mission there. In the next few days, he will speak before a number of organizations in Washington, Baltimore and New York on Chinese Industrial Cooperatives, which promise to be of great assistance in reorganizing China on democratic principles.

Among functions planned for Sir Stafford is a dinner to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot on Saturday evening. The following day, he will be feted at a reception given by the Pinchots.

Today, Sir Stafford will go to Baltimore, where this afternoon he will speak at Johns Hopkins University. This evening, he will appear before the Foreign Policy Association of Baltimore on a program, which will also include a speech by Senator Lewis Schwellenbach.

On Saturday, Sir Stafford will be guest speaker at a luncheon to be given by the Barnard College Club of Washington at the Mayflower Hotel. Another engagement on his Capital calendar will be a dinner to be given Thursday evening by Richard Hogue. The latter originally planned to fete Sir Stafford last night, but arrangements were changed hastily when it was discovered that the visitor had missed the clipper on which he had hoped to leave the Orient early last week.

Sir Stafford will speak before the National Press Club tomorrow, and a number of other engagements have been tentatively listed on his Washington schedule. He will have a press conference at 11 o'clock this morning in the apartment of Miss Edna Lonigan, 601 Nineteenth street.

A BROTHER-IN-LAW of Violet, Duchess of Westminster and a nephew of Beatrice Webb, Sir Stafford is a son of Lord Parmoor who was lord high president of the council in both labor governments.

A comprehensive book on Sir Stafford entitled "Cripps in Opposition" was written by Eric Estorick, another current visitor to Washington. According to Mr. Estorick, who is on the faculty of New York University, Sir Stafford is "one of the very few dynamic leaders of the British Labor Party, from which he was expelled last year for Popular Front activities."

Perhaps, interviews and speeches he will give in this country will clarify the purpose of his missions to India, China and Russia. As Mr. Estorick puts it, "Cripps has been most recently accused by the official and near-Communist press on the one hand as being an agent for Chamberlain and British imperialism, and by the anti-Soviet press on the other, for officially seeking a British-Russian rapprochement. Charges and insinuations concerning his junkets can now be scotched."

Last spring, Sir Stafford joined several other members of Parliament in forming the Anglo-Chinese Cooperative Development Society. Despite the outbreak of the war, Sir Stafford felt that the movement was so important that he did not abandon his plan for making a personal inspection in China. What he will have to report here and in his homeland will be the promising work already being carried on by 1,500 little factories that are helping 45,000 refugees, disabled soldiers and civilians to become self-supporting.

AFTER A WEEK'S STAY in Washington Sir Stafford will go to New York where on March 9 he and Pearl Buck will speak at the Washington Irving High School on "Reconstruction in China." He will leave for England by clipper on April 13.

Mary Pitney, RowlandHazard Are Engaged

Prospective Bride Is Granddaughter Of Late Justice

Of wide interest to Washington is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Shelton Pitney, of Morristown, N. J., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Foster Pitney, to Rowland Gibson Hazard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rowland Hazard, of Druid's Dream, Narragansett Pier, R. I.

Miss Pitney is a granddaughter of Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, of Washington and of the late Associate Justice Pitney of the United States Supreme Court. She was presented to society here at a tea given by her grandmother several seasons ago.

The prospective bride attended the Chatham Hall School in Virginia and the Spence School in New York. She was introduced to society at a dance at the Morristown Country Club and is a member of the Junior League of New York.

Mr. Hazard was graduated from St. Paul's School in Concord, N. H., and also studied at Princeton University, where he was a member of the Colonial Club. He is a member of the eleventh generation of a family which settled in Rhode Island in 1639. His mother is the former Miss Helen Hamilton Campbell, of Chicago, and his great-aunt, Miss Caroline Hazard, is president-elect of Wellesley College. Mr. Hazard is a nephew of Mrs. Rush Sturges, Mrs. R. H. Ives Goddard, Mrs. Wallace Campbell and T. Pierrepont Hazard, State treasurer of Rhode Island.

The wedding will take place June 15.

Miss Dingee Plights Troth

Miss Anne Lancaster Dingee, daughter of Mrs. Henry Tatnall Bush, of "Jacob's Well," Wilmington, Del., has selected Friday, May 3, as the date of her wedding to Llewellyn Pugh Haden, son of Dr. and Mrs. William Dandridge Haden, of Charlottesville, Va. The ceremony will take place at 4:30 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bush and will be witnessed only by members of the immediate families.

Miss Dingee's attendants will be the Misses Elizabeth Catherine Haden, of Charlottesville, sister of the prospective bridegroom, and Elizabeth Campbell Patterson, of Wilmington. W. Dandridge Haden, jr., of Charlottesville, will act as best man for his brother, and the ushers will be Alexis McGrath and Thomas R. Shepherd, also of Charlottesville.

A small reception will follow the ceremony.

War Won't Close the Honey Shop; Proprietor Has 13 Tons of Stock

CAPITAL NOTABLES who patronize the most original business enterprise in Washington—E. Lyn Woodin's honey shop in Georgetown—have been wondering if the war would oblige their favorite storekeeper to go out of business. For Mr. Woodin orders most of his stock from half a hundred foreign countries, ranging from the Antipodes to Greece to Chile.

But in two rooms in Mr. Woodin's lodgings in Georgetown are stored 13 tons of honey, enough to last him two years. "After that," he says, "I'm going to quit. Life is too short, and I want to relax before I die." This despite the fact that Mr. Woodin is only in the honey business for fun, and limits store hours from 3 to 6 in the afternoon. The shop is closed the rest of the time.

HIS LITTLE hole in the wall on Wisconsin avenue measures exactly 4 feet by 12, and every shelf is filled with jar on jar of honey, of all possible varieties. The only other commodity he favors is beeswax candles, which hang in clusters from the ceiling. Mr. Woodin took up honey as a hobby many years ago after visiting the bee-keeping establishment of a friend in Kansas. His customers include Mrs. Owen J. Roberts and many another well-known Georgetown citizen.

In spring and summer the door of his shop stands always open and passersby can peer in at the owner, seated on his high stool adding up figures or gazing admiringly at his honey pots.

AN ATTRACTIVE VISITOR over the week-end was Mrs. Mary Hand Churchill, of New York, daughter of Judge Learned Hand, of that city. She came down to visit Mrs. Shaw Parker at her home in Georgetown and was guest of honor at a small and informal cocktail party given by Dorothea Villard.

Miss Villard is another New Yorker, the daughter of Oswald Garrison Villard, liberal editor and writer. She has taken a charming small house in Georgetown, which has a long living room with pale yellow wallpaper and green rugs. She has filled it with old and handsome pieces of furniture.

The hostess received her guests wearing a smart blue and white print. Among those who dropped in for a drink were Mrs. Parker, Miss Marcia Umbsen, Harry Covington, Andrew Wylie and James West.

DISDAINING ANYTHING so banal as an April Fool joke of the "Call Mr. Lion" variety, an unidentified person really set to work yesterday to be creative and succeeded in ruining the day for a local bachelor establishment. Morning, afternoon and evening their phone rang and at the other end was always a different young lady calling to answer a newspaper ad seeking a "refined and genteel" hostess for such-and-such a household—which happened to be that of the bachelors.

ODDS AND ENDS: Guests at Mrs. Edward B. McLean's "Friendship" can step up to the bar and order anything they want. There is even a mixer contraption for chocolate milkshakes . . . On their tour of the Middle West Archduke Otto and Brother Felix are accompanied everywhere by the photographer for a well-known magazine. Polite Otto insists on carrying the case of flash bulbs himself . . . Ellen Hewes Flowerree returns to Washington today after a stay in New Orleans. Speaking of debutantes, Arthur Bradley Campbell will arrive tomorrow with his young cousins, the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser. Miss Caroline Nash will give a dinner for the debs April 10, at the 1925 F street Club.

Carolyn Watson Becomes Bride Of J. L. Fulton, Jr.

Now on their honeymoon in New York, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Fulton, jr., will make their home in Washington.

The former Miss Carolyn Pierce Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Watson, of Washington, and Mr. Fulton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Fulton, of Evansville, Ind., were married March 28 at First Baptist Church here. Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of the church, officiated.

A few relatives and close friends attended.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a powder blue jacket ensemble with matching accessories and an orchid corsage.

Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at Normandie Farms for the families, including the brother of the bride, Harry L. Watson, jr., of Philadelphia. When the couple left for their wedding journey the bride was wearing a black tailored suit with yellow blouse and black patent leather accessories.

Both the bride and bridegroom attended George Washington University, where the former was president of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority for two years. Mr. Fulton is a member of Tau Sigma Rho Fraternity and is associated with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Dinner Honors Chinese Adviser

The Financial Adviser to the Chinese Government and Mrs. Charles Lauru, who are being widely entertained during their stay in Washington, were honor guests at a dinner given last evening by Clarence Hewes at his home on Massachusetts avenue.

The Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb will entertain at a cocktail party for M. and Mme. Lauru on Thursday, and the same day M. and Mme. Lauru will be hosts at luncheon.

Mrs. Fred Barker gave a cocktail party over the week-end in honor of the couple, who are spending several weeks in Washington on a vacation. Their home is in Peking.

Ann Brown Will Make Debut Friday

Miss Eleanor Conolly To Present Cousin At a Tea-Dance

The first debut of the spring season will take place on Friday afternoon when Miss Eleanor Mary Connolly presents to society her cousin, Miss Ann Brown, of Dubuque, Iowa. The party, a tea-dance, will take place at the Sulgrave Club from 4:30 to 7 p. m.

A senior at Georgetown Visitation Convent, Miss Brown returned yesterday from Dubuque, where she spent Easter week with her parents. Although she is completing a straight academic course, she is very much interested in dancing and is toying with the idea of following a career in that line.

Assisting the debutante and the hostess on Friday will be the 23 other girls who will be graduated with Miss Brown in June.

Many members of the younger set have been invited, as well as a sizable number of Miss Connolly's friends.

Incidentally, Miss Connolly is busy hours on end these days at Georgetown Hospital. She began her training as a Red Cross nurse during the last war, and is now once more on duty with a group assigned to work in two hospitals here.

Miss Clarke Entertained

Miss Margaret H. Clark and Guy E. Crampton, jr., whose engagement was announced recently, will be married Friday, May 3, at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. Miss Clark is the daughter of W. A. Graham Clark, of Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Frank Cummings Cook, jr., will be matron of honor and the bridesmaids will be Mrs. James A. Johnson, of Bronxville, N. Y., the former Miss Betty Angus, of Washington; Miss Aileen Havlin Harris, and Mrs. William Wright, sister of the bridegroom.

Miss Clark was guest of honor at a luncheon given over the week-end at Mrs. K's Toll House Tavern by Mrs. Harry Clifton Ames, jr. Mrs. James Kerr Mebane will be hostess at luncheon today at the Colonial Dames Club in honor of Miss Clark.

Guests will be Mrs. Harry Clifton Ames, jr., Mrs. Frank Cummings Cook, jr., Mrs. Frederick J. Denniston, Miss Anne Graham, Miss Aileen Harris, Mrs. Donald Chenoweth Kline, Miss Dorothy Pickett, Miss Nancy Saltsman, Mrs. Hebert B. Thatcher and Mrs. William E. Wright.

Mrs. Taft Faces Busy Schedule

Mrs. Robert A. Taft, wife of the Senator from Ohio, faces a schedule that will keep her away from Washington most of the time from now until May. Accompanying the Senator, she will leave today for Ohio to attend the pre-primary Republican convention there this week.

Later, she will go to Boston, where she is scheduled for a speech. While there, she will be the guest of Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, wife of the former Secretary of the Navy. Mid-April will find her filling engagements in the Middle West, and later, she and Senator Taft will be in St. Louis for a brief stay.

Yesterday, Mrs. Taft was guest of honor at a small luncheon given by Miss Maxine Davis at the latter's home in Georgetown. Ranking guest at the fete was Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone. Others there included Mrs. Edward Bruce, Mrs. John O. Herrick, Miss Winifred Mallon, Mrs. John M. Enochs, Mrs. Bulkley Griffin and Mrs. J. Fred Essary.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Chester H. Warrington, of 12 Oxford street, Chevy Chase, Md., have announced that the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Myrtle Warrington, to Lieut. Langfit B. Wilby, U. S. A., has been terminated by mutual consent. The couple were to have been married this month.

Ickes to Attend Concert Tonight

The White House box at Constitution Hall will be occupied tonight by Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, who will entertain guests at the concert to be given by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

Rose Bampton, mezzo soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, will be soloist. She replaces Washington's Frances Nash, who had to undergo an operation for a back injury.

Justice and Mrs. Owen Roberts have a box for the concert. Among their guests will be the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins. Mrs. William S. Masten will entertain a party, including her debutante daughter, Miss Nancy Lee Masten, and several students from Princeton University, who are her house guests.

Others who have made reservations include Mrs. Thomas Reed, Mrs. Drew Pearson, L. W. Coe, H. L. Rust, jr., and Mrs. Roland Kidersmith.

Among the compositions to be presented for the first time in Washington is "Santa Fe Trail," by Dr. Harl McDonald, manager for the orchestra.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward were to have been hosts at a supper tonight following the concert, in honor of Miss Nash, who in private life is Mrs. Edwin Watson, but canceled the party when she had to withdraw.

Miss Elizabeth Fish Sees Art Exhibit

Miss Elizabeth Fish, daughter of Representative Hamilton Fish, is spending several days in New York to see the exhibit of Italian masters at the Museum of Modern Art. These famous paintings were shown first at the San Francisco Exposition last summer.

Miss Fish will make her debut May 4 at a tea.

Maj. and Mrs. Barry Announce It's a Boy

Maj. and Mrs. David S. Barry announce the birth of a son yesterday at Garfield Hospital. They have not yet gotten around to deciding on a name for the baby, who is their first son.

Opera Sponsors To Give Luncheon On Saturday

A member of Congress and several diplomats will be guests of honor at the monthly luncheon of the Civic Grand Opera Association on Saturday at Hotel Chastleton.

Mme. Amelia Conti, artistic director of the association, has invited Representative Robert L. Mouton, the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Munilla, the First Secretary of the Finnish Legation and Mme. Solanko; and Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas.

The luncheon will be followed by a musical program featuring operatic selections. The association has scheduled a spring season of opera to be held in Constitution Hall, May 9, 10, and 11, with distinguished artists from New York presenting Manon, Lucia and a double bill of Cavalleria Rusticana and La Serva Padrona.

First Lady Aids Finn's Recital

Mrs. Roosevelt heads the distinguished patrons for the musicale to be given on April 18 at 4 o'clock at the Sulgrave Club by Reino Luoma, 20-year-old Finnish pianist.

Other sponsors of the concert include the Minister of Finland, Hjalmar J. Procope; the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Dr. Hans Kindler, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. Ethel Wister Chichester and Miss Lucy Brickenstein.

The National Symphony Orchestra has twice featured M. Luoma as guest soloist, the first time when he was only 18. Miss LaVerne Roberts is in charge of reservations for his concert April 18.

G. O. P. Still in Business, Women's League Told

Party Is at Same Old Stand, Says Former Senator James E. Watson; Mrs. Gann Reelected President

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

The Republican Party is still here and doing business at the same old stand, former Senator James E. Watson yesterday told the League of Republican Women. He addressed its annual meeting at the Mayflower Hotel at which Mrs. Edward Everett Gann was reelected president.

Offering a return to Republicanism as the one remedy for the country's present ills, he enumerated the principles for which the party has stood in the past and which he said would bring prosperity and employment to the country again.

"The Republican Party still believes in the Constitution of the United States," said former Senator Watson," although it has been kicked around considerably in the last few years.

"It still believes in local self-government . . . The people in each community know better how to run their own business than people in 14-floor buildings in Washington."

Still Believes In Tariffs

The Republican Party still believes in the protective tariff because it has to do with wages, and "you can't have prosperity without paying wages to the workers," he asserted. Every Democratic President has left the country debt ridden, he said.

Although the charge was made during the prosperous McKinley Administration that there was too much money in the hands of a few, prosperity was general, he pointed out. There will always be those who have more than others, he added, holding that it is impossible because of the nature of individuals to maintain economic equality among mankind.

"You can't have prosperity in America without a protective tariff," he declared.

Although he paid tribute to Secretary of State Cordell Hull—"no finer man stands under the flag than Cordell Hull, and his admirable wife"—he was opposed to the reciprocal trade agreements.

The Republican Party believes in self-protective preparedness—to keep America out of Europe and Europe out of America—"America for Americans under our own system of Government," he said.

Mrs. Virginia Speel Is on Platform

Mrs. Gann presided at the meeting and Mrs. James G. Wentz, program chairman, introduced the speaker.

On the platform was Mrs. Virginia Speel, founder and first vice president of the league, whose name headed the list of officers, as honorary president. Serving with Mrs. Gann for the coming year will be: Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, first vice president; Mrs. Wentz, second vice president; Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, third vice president; Mrs. William S. Culbertson, fourth vice president; Mrs. William O. Gilbert, fifth vice president; Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, sixth vice president; Mrs. E. S. Kochersperger, recording secretary; Mrs. James C. Wilkes, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. William H. Scott, corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. E. Quayle, assistant corresponding secretary; Miss Grace Burton, treasurer; Mrs. Hugh M. Southgate, assistant treasurer.

The directors are: Mrs. Henry Albers, Mrs. Paris E. Brengle, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. M. Webster Dawley, Mrs. Warren J. Haines, Mrs. Howard S. Leroy, Mrs. William H. Mondell, Miss Daisy M. Prentice, Mrs. Maurice H. Thatcher and Mrs. G. Louis Weller.

Business Women Know Nursery Rhymes Best—No Foolin'

Underwood & Underwood

Among the Mother Goose characters at the April Fool Frolic of the Washington Branch of the A. A.U. W. last night, were (left to right) Mrs. Goodwin Graham, as Little Bo Peep; Miss Marion Chapman, as Old Mother Hubbard, and Miss Barbara Ottinger, as Little Miss Muffett

Team of Housewives Go Down in Defeat On Rock-a-Bye Baby Before Group Of A. A. U. W. Members in Professions

Professional women and not housewives are the ones who know their nursery rhymes. This was proved last evening at the annual April Fool Frolic and Stunt Party of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women when members of the housewives' team, pitted against the professional group, went down to ignominous defeat on "Rock-a-Bye Baby"—they just couldn't remember how it went.

Mrs. Edmund Campbell, dressed as a modern Mother Goose, was chairman of arrangements and mistress of ceremonies for the party which was an afternoon and evening event.

In the afternoon at 4:30, the regular Monday tea hour, the club members were entertained with group singing, led by Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, an impromptu play, "She Loved a G-Man" and the "Information Please" stunt.

The information called for was all from Mother Goose rhymes. Miss Anna Pearl Cooper, of the faculty of George Washington University, dressed in her academic cap and gown, acted as interrogator.

One of the unexpected features of the question period was the arrival of Dr. Stuart A. Rice to escort his wife home. A message was sent out, inviting him to sit on the platform as an honor guest while he waited for her, and the audience was asked what nursery rhyme would fit the case of the wife, late in getting home. The answer was: "A diller, a dollar, a 10 o'clock scholar."

Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, president of the club, was captain of the housewives' team, which was defeated by the professional women headed by Mrs. Albert Barrows, dean of women at George Washington University.

On Mrs. Van Vleck's team were Mrs. Clyde Hadley, Mrs. Rice, Mrs. John Minert Sharf and Mrs. Richard Hogue.

On the winning team with Dean Barrows were Miss Mary Louise Chace, Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, Miss Lulu May Lybrook, and Miss Barbara Patterson.

Ushers for the afternoon were dressed in Mother Goose costumes and led the grand march to the buffet supper in the evening.

Later, the 200 club members attending, played bridge and joined in square dances.

Daughters Plan Dance and Card Party Thursday

A gala party is being planned by Court 212, Catholic Daughters of America, for Thursday night. Both ballrooms of the Willard Hotel have been engaged for the card party and dance.

Hamblin, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William H. Harper, treasurer; Mrs. Richard E. Claughton, retiring president, and the following directors: Mrs. William B. Sinnott, Miss Margaret E. Naylor, Miss Mary J. Edmonds and Mrs. Thomas H. Seay.

Rixey Mansion Inn, Country Club Hills, Va., has been reserved for the club's annual spring luncheon for Saturday afternoon, June 1, and plans for this annual affair will be completed at the meeting following the luncheon.

D. A. R. Juniors Gain in Strength

Junior groups of members of the Daughters of the American Revolution are growing in popularity and in number.

Over 400 chapters now have junior groups or committees actively engaged in promoting various programs within the structure of the D. A. R. Composed of college girls, business girls and young matrons, these members are arranging meetings and other activities.

Most junior groups are interested particularly in educational and philanthropic projects—Americanism, Junior American Citizens and Good Citizenship pilgrimages. They arrange their own programs, although under the constitution and by-laws of the national society.

The junior groups in the District have contributed particularly to schools for underprivileged children. Mrs. Edward L. Everitt is chairman of the junior membership committee in the District.

Activities of the juniors of the whole country are under the chairmanship of Mrs. George D. Schermerhorn, of Reading, Mich., who is national chairman of the junior membership committee.

Luncheon of W. C. T. U. Honors Mrs. Moody

Mrs. Orrel Moody, founder and first president of the North Star Women's Christian Temperance Union, will be guest of honor at an anniversary luncheon given by the union today at 12:30, in Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison streets.

Miss Florence Caspar has charge of patronesses, and Mrs. W. T. Lock and Miss Dorothy Nesline will arrange for the prizes for the card players. Miss France. O'Donnell is arranging for music. Dance programs and cards are being handled by Miss Margaret E. Sheehand, with the Misses Kathryn E. Bowers and Lucille Shull in charge of publicity.

Neighbor Club Will Present Piano Program

Arlington Ensemble To Play Tomorrow At Mrs. Smith's Studio

A program of piano ensemble music will be presented tomorrow afternoon at the studio of Mrs. Frances Gutelius Smith, 3835 North Upland street, Arlington, for the April meeting of the Neighbors Club. It is probably the only women's organization in the vicinity—exclusive of one devoted exclusively to music—which has piano ensemble work as one of the activities of its membership.

Mrs. Smith became a member of the Neighbors Club soon after she moved to Arlington five years ago and presented several programs at its meetings. Then, at the request of members who enjoyed playing, but were getting rusty on their technique, she agreed to direct them in ensemble playing.

They rehearse at her studio where three pianos are at their disposal, and tomorrow will present numbers for four, six and eight hands—the works of Mozart, Nevin, Brahms, Grieg, Strauss and Sousa.

Studio Will Hold Audience of 80

The large studio room, with its two-story ceiling and accommodation for an audience of 80, provides the setting for the concert.

On the program will be Mrs. J. McLean Clifford, Mrs. Walter T. McCarthy, Mrs. D. A. Merritt, Mrs. John C. Gall, Mrs. Edward F. Pierce and Mrs. A. Lane Cricher.

Afterwards the club members will go around the corner to the home of Mrs. E. F. Pierce, 3840 Chesterbrook road, where tea will be served. The assistant hostesses will be Mrs. J. J. Bush, Mrs. F. W. Camp, Mrs. D. Forrester, Mrs. Ralph Quick, Mrs. Luke Thompson, Mrs. Myron Thompson, Mrs. F. Upman, Mrs. M. Van Siclen, Mrs. Brice Weaver, Mrs. Arthur Williams, Mrs. P. T. Williams and Mrs. P. T. Wright.

Meetings Replace Formal Visits

The club, of which Mrs. Art Brown is president, was formed 20 years ago by a group of women who preferred meeting informally for tea once a month to making formal calls. Mrs. Frank Suter, the founder, is still an active member. The meetings are held sometimes at St. Mary's Church Hall, on Glebe road, and sometimes at the Washington Golf and Country Club. There are 130 members.

In addition to the general club meetings there are monthly sessions of the current history section under the chairmanship of Mrs. E. A. Howell; home and garden, under Mrs. Russell L. Wime, and drama, Mrs. Harcourt C. Sontag. The current history section has sponsored a series of lectures by Dr. Wesley M. Gewehr, of American University this season, at St. Mary's Church, open to the public, for a small fee.

Mrs. John Tunis is chairman of membership and Mrs. G. Willard Quick and Mrs. Fred N. Windridge are in charge of the yearbook.

The only outside activities to which it lends interest are the book funds of the John Marshall and James Madison schools to which it contributes annually.

Mrs. W. S. Chesley To Be Tea Hostess

Mrs. Willoughby S. Chesley will entertain at tea tomorrow from 4 to 6 o'clock at the Arts Club, 2017 I street northwest, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. George Lloyd, of Mount Vernon Seminary. The guests will be the members of Mount Vernon Seminary Alumnae Association in and near Washington.

Mrs. Richard W. Hynson, jr., president of the Mount Vernon Seminary Alumnae Association, will receive with Mrs. Chesley and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd. Miss Emma Mertins Thom, vice president of Mount Vernon Seminary; Miss Grace Willis, Mrs. Herbert L. Willett, jr., Miss Mary Louise Allen, officers and members of the executive committee, will assist Mrs. Chesley.

Among others assisting will be Mrs. Charles Wilbur Fairfax, Mrs. James H. Patten, Mrs. Robert Watson, Mrs. Charles Kutz, Mrs Jean Joseph Lebat, Mrs. Frank Hough Towner, Mrs. Charles Hayes, Miss Harriet Belle Walker, Mrs. William B. Searle, Mrs. R. W. Bolling, Miss Clara Lutz, Miss Gertrude Lutz, Mrs. Carl Droop, Mrs. Theodore Palmer.

The punch bowl on the gallery will be presided over by the Misses Ruth Ellen Paul, Patricia Fowler, Edith Pearson, Nancy Lee Richardson, Nancy Davis, Mitzie Birney and Ann Barr.

Mrs. Deal Plans Party to Benefit Sunshine Society

Mrs. W. W. Deal, president of the Sunshine and Community Society, announced a silver tea to be given at her home, 6402 Sixteenth street, Wednesday, April 17, for the benefit of the society's charitable activities. The society met yesterday at the Gilbert.

The ways and means committee, of which Mrs. F. H. Shortall is chairman, also announced a large card party to be given as a benefit on April 24, at Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. C. E. Boyer, chairman of the May breakfast to be held at the Shoreham Hotel, asked members to make their reservations early with Mrs. S. G. Kerry.

Free Lance Writers Will Meet Thursday

The Society of Free Lance Writers will meet at the Shoreham Hotel Thursday night at 8 o'clock. The president, Parke A. Arnold, will preside, and John Flodin will read and discuss Finland's great epic, "Kalevala."

Winners in the recent feature article contest will be announced by Blair Bolles, author of a number of books and writer of articles, who judged the manuscripts.

The year book, edited by Mrs. Edith Edwards, will be soon ready for distribution to members.

At the last meeting original stories by Maj. E. L. Dyer, Mrs. T. C. Willis and Benjamin F. Ferrill, were read and discussed.

Trinity College Alumnae Plan Supper Dance

Many out of town visitors are expected to attend the annual supper given by the Washington Chapter of Trinity College Alumnae at the Congressional Country Club on the evening of May 10.

Mrs. Raymond Rupert, general chairman of the dance, has announced the following as patrons: Senator and Mrs. Allen Joseph Ellender, Senator and Mrs. Francis T. Maloney, Senator and Mrs. Charles O. Andrews, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, and Senator David I. Walsh.

Garden Club Plans Exhibition Friday

The Washington Garden Club is having an exhibition of flower arrangements and containers at the Y. W. C. A. Friday at 1:30 o'clock. R. R. Beckwith is the guest artist. Those interested in artistic floral arrangements are invited to attend.

The club will hold its next regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Floyd B. Olcott, 7828 Orchid street northwest, Monday at 2 p. m. with Mrs. Theodore M. Huntley as cohostess. Mrs. Theodore I. Coe and James Thorp will speak.

Mrs. Stirling Named to Head Peace League

Succeeds Mrs. Marsh As Chapter President; Dr. Williams Talks

Mrs. W. Calhoun Stirling yesterday was elected president of the District branch of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, succeeding Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, who has served for the past 18 months.

The election took place at the annual meeting at Friends Meeting House, on Florida avenue. Dr. Chester Williams was guest speaker on "Cultural Diversity and National Unity."

Other new officers are: Mrs. Daniel Partridge, jr., first vice president; Mrs. Harry January, second vice president; Mrs. Karl Loos, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ebert K. Burlew, treasurer; Mrs. Lewis Butz, recording secretary; Mrs. Marsh, Mrs. Ludwell Denny, Miss Edith J. Goode, Miss Bertha McNeill, delegates-at-large.

Dr. Williams, who is assistant administrator of the Federal Forum project in the Office of Education, emphasized the Bill of Rights as a basis for cultural diversity within the country. People need not be divided simply because they have different cultural or religious background, he said. He blamed a feeling of insecurity for intolerance for others' ideas or beliefs.

Dictators play on the insecurity of the people, and, through force, oblige them to conform to the program of the dictatorship. This, however, does not produce unity but ultimate dissension which leads to war, he said, because it offers neither freedom nor security.

In this country, as long as we live up to the Bill of Rights, national and cultural freedom is secured to the people, he said, and within this protection, diversity of opinion enriches and gives color to the life of the Nation.

Census Taking Under Way, Chiefs Can Rest

Officials Fear Tobey May Make Volume A Costly Best Seller

By Edward Ryan

Just once during each decade do the men in charge of census taking get the time to sit back and rest.

Their relief comes, oddly, the day the census starts, and yesterday officials were looking forward to this morning as a brief hour of peace.

Census Director William Lane Austin, now into his fifth census, and his right-hand man, Dr. Vergil Reed, who has tossed some of the most sizzling curves in the duel with Senator Robey, surveyed their status yesterday and thought the picture good.

"Better Than Ever"

Austin said "more people know about the census than ever before, and it's going to be a better census than ever."

Dr. Reed remarked, "we've put over our artillery barrage, and now all we have to do is to let the infantry move in."

The artillery was still cracking back at them in the form of a bill in the Senate to remove the jail penalty for noncooperation, but, said the chief census takers, their army is trained to the last man.

It is the first time, Austin explained, that the training work has filtered down past the level of supervisors. They received this year a week instead of two days, while the enumerators were given four days of class work in addition to pamphlet instruction.

Popularity Would Be Costly

There is an excellent chance, officials were saying yesterday, that all the criticism of the census will turn out to have reverse English and give the census a boost with bad publicity. It's likely to be a costly boost. In the past, officials said, their most popular publications have run into 25,000 or 30,000 copies at best. If the census becomes a best seller, the costs will mount.

The thought of having a best seller does not discourage census officials. It's only a long shot in the first place, and they are doing all they can to risk that chance. A census movie, compiled from films available, is being shown in numerous theaters this week. Officials estimate that some 2,500,000 sample copies of the agriculture census have been shown to farmers through their papers and county agents. In 1,500 cities, local organizations have been spreading information about the questions and the need for answers, while more than 200,000 copies of a four-page digest telling the story of the census were sent into the schools.

Austin's first job with the census was editing farm returns, in 1900, and since then he has handled nearly every assignment in the bureau up to the top.

Taking of Census Will Begin Today

In a broadcast last night Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, continued his fight against income questions, terming Commerce Secretary Hopkins' plan of permitting answers to be mailed in sealed envelopes "a subtle trick."

He charged the blanks furnished persons willing to give income data provided their names are withheld contain "clever keys" to be filled in by the enumerator. Tobey said the enumerator was to write in "a couple of figures" which tie the abbreviated to the more complete one the citizen sends in.

"What hypocrisy!" he said. "What deceit! What a fraud upon the American people, telling you in a press statement that you do not need to sign your name on the income blank . . . and then, through a subtle system of earmarking your identity; learning the amount of your income by deception."

While the national census storm crackled nearby, District census officials said they were ready to begin their job.

Garnett R. Brown, area director for the Washington count, said that his crew would be in the fields and on the doorsteps and around the corners at 8:30 a. m. today. The local force on the job this morning will total 479.

On the local front the census campaign last night appeared certain to develop this way:

Exactly 409 regular enumerators and 37 special enumerators, for institutions, have their large schedule books and their instructions. About 8 a. m. today they will report to squad leaders, in the local police precincts. The squad leaders, 28 of them, will give their men a brief "inspirational" address and last-minute advice, then send them out about 8:30 a. m.

In the background supervising the work are Brown, with headquarters at First and M streets northeast, and four assistant managers: David J. Shaw, Arel B. Cook, Herbert Henderson and Raymond S. Howell. The enumerators are expected to put in an eight-hour day and to report back for inspection of their work by the squad leaders.

The Washington census, like that of other cities, is expected to be completed in two weeks. A month is allowed for the agriculture census but officials think the count of 60 odd local farms can be finished in the two-week period.

The count of population will cover everyone in the country at 12:01 a. m. yesterday. Babies born after that moment won't get counted, while all who died after the zero hour will be listed.

Local reports on population will be published by area managers before their material is sent into Washington for the lengthy tabulation. The bulk of this work, expected to be finished by January, 1943, will be done at the new Census Building, at Third and D streets southwest, set up to house 7,000 employes and batteries of high-speed mechanical "brains" for the counting job.

Austin said yesterday that the difficulties facing the census takers would include weather and flood conditions. Floods in Pennsylvania and near Sacramento, snow in northern New York and the Rockies, will hinder but not stop the counters.

In this class is Mrs. Elva Canfield, 67-year-old retired school teacher, who will be on her way for the third time in 20 years into one of the Nation's toughest census assignments.

13 Dare Alcoholic Snakebite Antidote and Smack Their Lips

Thirteen members of the United States Patent Sesquicentennial Committee dared the pitfalls of Joshua T. Smith's snakebite antidote last night, and decided that the alcohol-iodine mixture could be worse, maybe.

The "suicide squad"—composed of prominent officials and businessmen—tried the potion, along with various other patented foods and liquors, at a preview of the patented food banquet which will be staged April 10 for some 1,200 guests.

The Smith medicine, patented by Smith, of Coffee County, Ga., in 1888, was the high spot of the preview performance. It consists of "one quart of alcohol, two ounces of gall of the earth (nabulus fraseri); one ounce mohawk, also known as rattlesnake weed (hieracium venosum); one-fourth ounce alum, and 32 drops of iodine."

After imbibing the concoction, the committee's only comment, besides a general smacking of lips, was that the lethal properties of the antidote are much overrated.

Among the committee were Representative Kramer (Democrat), of California, of the House Patent Committee; Commissioner Allen, Conway P. Coe, United States Commissioner of Patents, and Judge Finis J. Garrett, presiding justice of the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals.

'Subversion' Hard to Define, Jackson Says

Tells U. S. Prosecutors To Confine Cases To Overt Acts

Attorney General Robert Jackson admitted to the Federal Prosecutors of the Nation, gathered here yesterday, that the Government is without any "definite standards to determine what constitutes a subversive activity."

He urged therefore, that in the enforcement of laws which protect the national integrity and well-being, United States attorneys uniformly confine themselves to the prosecution of "overt acts" in combating subversive groups and individuals.

Jackson made it clear he wants no cases originated which are based on holding of meetings, petitioning of Congress, or dissemination of news or opinions.

Praises Hatch Act

Jackson's address was delivered before 100 United States attorneys from all over the country, meeting for the second annual United States Attorneys' conference.

H eadvised the district attorneys to comply strictly with the Hatch Act, barring them from political activity.

Jackson expressed the view it might be personally advantageous for the Federal attorneys to have been legally divorced from participation in politics. He said:

"There can be no doubt that to be closely identified with the intrigue, the money raising, and the machinery of a particular party or faction may present a prosecuting officer with embarrassing alignments and associations. I think the Hatch Act should be utilized by Federal prosecutors as a protection against demands on their time and their prestige to participate in the operation of the machinery of practical politics."

Defines Jurisdiction

Jackson also warned against arbitrary interjection of the Federal force into other legal jurisdictions.

In later sessions yesterday, Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, heading the antitrust division, appealed to the prosecutors for future collaboration in the expanding "trust-busting" campaign of the Government. Prisons Director James Bennett also spoke.

Today J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and O. John Rogge, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the criminal division, will speak to the conference on law enforcement.

Takoma Flashes A Traffic Light

The first and only traffic light in Takoma Park, Md., flashed into action at 6:30 p. m. yesterday as Mayor J. R. Adams threw a switch at Laurel and Carrol avenues. The light was installed as the result of a drive by the Chamber of Commerce.

Rites for Raymond B. Dickey, Lawyer, to Be Held Tomorrow

Dean of Banking Institute Faculty Was CCC General Counsel

RAYMOND B. DICKEY

Funeral rites for Raymond B. Dickey, 62, dean of faculty of the Washington Chapter of the American Institute of Banking and a prominent attorney, will be at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Deal funeral home, 4812 Georgia avenue northwest. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Dickey died yesterday in Emergency Hospital after a five months illness.

A native of Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Mr. Dickey was educated at Georgetown University where he was awarded an LL. B. degree in 1899 and his LL. M. the following year.

Counsel for CCC

At the time of his death he was general counsel for the Civilian Conservation Corps. For many years he taught the bills and notes course at the banking institute.

With his son, J. Maxwell Dickey, he maintained offices in the National Press Building. He made his home at 1702 Kilbourne street northwest.

An active Mason, Mr. Dickey was past grand high priest of the Royal Arch Masons of the District, and a member of the Almas Temple of the Shrine and the Kallipolis Grotto.

Optimist Past President

A member of the District Bar Association, he was past president of the Optimists Club.

Besides his son, J. Maxwell Dickey, he leaves his wife, Mrs. Rose M. Dickey; two other sons, Granville E., chief statistician of the Civilian Conservation Corps, and Raymond D. Dickey, of Arlington County, a public relations counsel; and a daughter, Mrs. Alice D. Thompson, of California and New York City, the editor of Glamour Magazine.

Honorary pallbearers will include Justice Jesse C. Adkins, Rudolph B. Behrend, Charles P. Clayton, Leslie C. Garnett, Edward C. Kriz, Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, Charles Pergler, jr.; Julius I. Peyser, John A. Reilly, United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, H. Winship Wheatley and William E. Willard.

200,000 Vote Today In Kansas City

Kansas City, April 1 (AP).—The battle for control of Kansas City's government, long dominated by Boss Tom Pendergast before his Boss Tom Pendergast before his tomorrow.

Leaders of both the cleanup movement, which demands an end to machine rule, and the Democratic organization, on which Pendergast rode to power, predicted victory. Both groups expect a heavy turnout of 200,000 voters. They drove hard into the final hours of the most spectacular finish ever seen in a city campaign.

Old-Age Claims Exceed Forecast

More people are collecting from the Federal old-age insurance program than the experts expected.

Statisticians, nearing the end of the first quarterly report, estimated yesterday that more than 100,000 claims had been filed and approximately $3,000,000 paid out since January 1.

It was indicated about 106,000 would file claims by March 31. The forecast was for 95,000.

D. D. Cline's Funeral Is Today

Masonic funeral services for Daniel Davis Cline, 61, Federal Housing Administration attorney and brother of Walter D. Cline, of Wichita Falls, Tex., imperial potentate of Masonic Shrines of the United States, will be at 11 a. m. today at the Takoma Park funeral home, 254 Carroll street, Takoma Park. Burial will be in National Capital Memorial Park Cemetery, near Muirkirk, Md.

Mr. Cline died suddenly Sunday at his home, 50 Woodlawn avenue, Takoma Park, Md. A native of Magnolia, Tex., he was graduated from Centenary College in 1898 and Louisiana State University in 1902. He received his law degree from the latter institution after teaching for two years in the college.

Mr. Cline served in the Louisiana State Legislature in 1912 and the following year was named district court judge in Baton Rouge. After practicing law for several years and engaging in the oil and real estate business in Amarillo, Tex., he came here in 1923.

He joined the legal staff of the FHA three years ago, after practicing privately here for 14 years.

Mr. Cline was a member of St. John's Lodge of Masons and the Order of the Eastern Star, in Baton Rouge.

Besides his brother, Walter Cline, he leaves his wife, Mrs. Ethel Griswold Cline; two daughters, Mrs. Cornelia C. Lewis, of Takoma Park, and Orville C. Eldridge, of Baton Rouge; a son, Hilton D. Cline, of Fort Worth, Tex., and two other brothers, Hal Cline, of Austin, Tex., and Abel Cline, of Bowie, Tex.

3 Groups Laud Choice Of Young

Citizens Indorse Wender and Wagshal To Succeed Curran As Police Judge

President Roosevelt's nomination of J. Russell Young, native newspaperman, to be District Commissioner won praise from three citizens' associations last night.

Harry S. Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association, was urged to succeed Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran by two associations and a third indorsed Philip Wagshal, of Metropolis View Association, for the post. Two associations praised the Alcohol Beverage Control Board and its chairman, recently under Congressional fire, for their administration of the liquor law.

Dupont Circle

Dupont Circle's association, at its meeting yesterday in the Mayflower, adopted resolutions expressing confidence in the integrity of members of the Alcoholic Control Board, suggesting the substitution of an iron fence for the present shrubbery around Dupont Circle fountain, and condemning horn-blowing after midnight.

Takoma Park, D. C.

Members of the Takoma Park (D. C.) Citizens Association last night re-elected Wallace C. Magathan to his ninth term as president of the organization.

Bruce E. Anderson was elected first vice president; Lewis A. Jones, second vice president; William M. Greene, secretary; Carl E. King, corresponding secretary; Dr. Norman E. McIndoo, treasurer, and Ralph M. Graham and William Greene, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Resolutions were adopted approving Senator Capper's bill to regulate the election of delegates from the District to national political conventions; requesting the repeal of present income tax laws in the District, and opposing the proposed moving of the municipal playground from Third and Van Buren streets northwest, to Fifth and Van Buren streets.

Georgetown Progressive

Dividing of a playground on the west side of Rock Creek below P street into areas for white and colored children was recommended last night in a resolution adopted by the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown.

The resolution asks the Park and Planning Commission to set aside the space between P street and Dumbarton avenue for white youngsters and that below Dumbarton avenue for colored. The change in population since the playground was projected calls for adding a play area for white children, the association decided.

A resolution of thanks to the President for naming a "real Washington resident" as District Commissioner in J. Russell Young was adopted.

Manor Park

The Manor Park Citizens Association, meeting at the Whittier School, adopted last night a resolution recommending that all elementary school principals be furnished with clerks.

The motion was advanced by George R. Kieferlee, acting chairman of the education committee.

The group decided to join the Whittier P.-T. A. in a banquet in the school auditorium April 23.

North Capitol

Praise for President Roosevelt for his appointment of John Russell Young to be District Commissioner, for Thomas E. Lodge for his record as chairman of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board, and for Representative John E. Sheridan for proposed investigation of District small loan companies was voted by the North Capitol Citizens Association last night.

Forest Hills

The Forest Hills Citizens Association last night went on record as disapproving of the proposed bill to regulate the dental profession and the proposed bill governing barbers in the District. The group argued each bill served only a special group and that neither was in the best interests of the public.

In the event any small loan legislation is enacted the group decided in favor of the Nichols bill over the Sheridan measure.

A question dealing with high school fraternities and sororities was referred to Mrs. William Meggers, chairman of the school committee.

Kenilworth Citizens

Appointment of J. Russell Young as District Commissioner was praised and Harry S. Wender was indorsed for Police Court judge by the Kenilworth Citizens Association, meeting in Kenilworth Recreation Center. Letters will be sent to President Roosevelt on both matters.

A resolution indorsing the Sheridan bill to investigate District small loan companies was adopted.

Earl Dillon was appointed delegate from the association to the Kenilworth Recreation Council.

Metropolis View

Philip Wagshal was urged for the Police Court judge vacancy by the Metropolis View Citizens Association, meeting last night at Crosby S. Noyes School. The vacancy was caused by the promotion of Judge Edwin Curran to District attorney.

The association named Mrs. Vincent P. Boudren secretary to succeed B. W. Bollinger, resigned.

Consecration Today for Head Of Catholic U.

The Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, will be consecrated Titular Bishop of Bilta this morning, with more than 40 members of the American hierarchy, many diplomats and Government officials attending the impressive ceremonies in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Bishop Corrigan will be the first rector of the university to be elevated to the episcopacy during his first term of office. Customarily, the elevation has come soon after appointment to a second five-year term.

At the ceremonies, Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia, will be the consecrator, and the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington and chancellor of the university, and the Most Rev. Edward Mooney, Archbishop of Detroit, will be the assistant consecrators. The Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, O. P., Archbishop of Cincinnati, will deliver the sermon.

A large delegation of clergy from the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, monsignore from various parts of the Nation, and priests from Baltimore, Washington and the religious houses of study affiliated with the university will attend the ceremonies.

The See of Bilta was among the oldest bishoprics in Africa. It is located in Tunisia in northern Africa. Once a city of considerable size, it now contains the ruins of a Roman citadel of the Byzantine epoch and foundations of several other buildings.

After the ceremonies, which begin at 10 a. m., members of the hierarchy will be seated at the head table with the new bishop at a luncheon in the university gymnasium.

The Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, vice rector of the university, will serve as toastmaster. Archbishop Curley will speak. After greetings from the faculty and alumni, Bishop Corrigan will address the guests.

Veterans of '98 Are Reunited In Celebration

Mass reunions of war veterans who fought together nearly half a century ago last night marked the fortieth anniversary ceremonies of the Henry W. Lawton Camp No. 4, of the United Spanish War Veterans.

Attending the celebration at Pythian Hall, 1012 Ninth street northwest, were two members of the original organization:

Its commander, William S. Hodges, of 1707 Irving street northwest, and William C. Ryan, who came down from New York for the occasion.

More than 100 Spanish-American War veterans were present, as well as members of the ladies' auxiliary and representatives of Washington's six other veterans' camps.

On the program were selections by the Boys' Band of Holy Comforter Church; a solo by Randolph Myers, and a recitation of the "Star-Spangled Banner" by John M. Kline.

Presiding was James E. Smith, of 1362 Otis place northwest, assisted by Mrs. Eugenie Renow, head of the ladies' auxiliary. Mrs. Katherine Lynch, of 1034 Perry street northeast, was in charge of entertainment.

Auto Ticket Is Adjusted For Steagall

Representative Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, six persons with diplomatic connections, and a Hawaiian visiting Washington were among the 70 persons whose traffic tickets were "adjusted" last week.

Sixty-three violators were excused with a warning, and seven tickets were canceled outright. Publication of the list was under the order of the Commissioners.

Ten violators were pardoned because they were on emergency business; three were on official Government business; four claimed that their cars were pushed after they parked; seven said they stopped momentarily; seven were strangers in the city and six had no previous record.

Steagall, who parked from 4 to 6 p. m. in a no-parking area, received a warning when he told police he was attending to official business.

Those with diplomatic connections were:

Ismael Sarasus, of the Chilean Embassy; Keith Merrill, of 2535 Belmont road northwest, "on business at the Spanish Embassy, requested by Ambassador Fernando de los Rios;" Adolfo Infante, of the Italian Embassy; Hassan Hosny, of the Egyptian Legation; Manabu Enseki, of the Japanese Embassy, and John L. Berrino, of the Egyptian Legation.

Dr. Robert L. Lam, of Hawaii, was excused for parking in an official space through the intercession of Samuel W. King, Delegate from Hawaii.

Dirksen Out To Amend Income Tax

District Committee Refuses to Revive Levy on Sales And Local Earnings

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, yesterday indicated he would ask Congress to amend the District income tax, after the House District Committee rejected a move to revive the sales-income tax plan turned down last Monday.

Dirksen, the sponsor of the income tax law, said he would study the amendment submitted by the Commissioners to extend the income levy to all earnings paid within the District and other proposals for broadening the act.

The Commissioners asked the House District Committee earlier in the day to amend the income tax act so as to overcome the confusion occasioned by the United States Court of Appeals ruling that the District may not tax the intangible personal property of persons not domiciled in Washington.

The committee appeared reluctant to take any further action on taxes at this session.

Members listened apathetically to a plea by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, that the committee try to call up the sales-income tax bill on next District day.

Declaring that the "dignity of the committee" was at stake, Nichols said that the members should demand that the House consider the revenue bill. He said that many members had advised him that they would have voted differently last Monday had they understood the issue.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, immediately sprung to the defense of the House and admitted he had "lobbied" against House consideration of the Nichols bill.

"Whipping," Says Eberharter

"It would be the height of folly to ask the House to reconsider the bill at this time," interjected Representative Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania. He added:

"I think we would get another whipping, which the House delights in giving the District Committee."

Three members of the committee suggested that an increase in the real estate rate by order of the Commissioners would be preferable to further legislation. They were Representatives Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin; Poage (Democrat), of Texas, and Schulte.

Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, warned that such action would increase rent "all along the line."

Nichols warned that a raise in the realty tax might be challenged in the courts.

Randolph Resentful

Chairman Randolph brought the discussion to an end by announcing that he would not recall the sales-income tax bill to the House floor unless directed to do so by a majority of the committee. He expressed resentment, however, over "insinuations" that he had acted improperly in calling up the bill last Monday when Dirksen and Bates were out of the city.

After the meeting Nichols indicated that he was in no hurry to bring the income tax amendment presented by Corporation Counsel Seal before his subcommittee.

The committee also became embroiled in the cost of a liberalized police and firemen's retirement bill, reported by Schulte, and finally postponed action when members complained that it was too liberal.

Bills for the regulation of the practice of podiatry and the transfer of the recording of motor vehicle liens from the recorder of deeds office to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic were discussed, but not acted upon.

Plea to Add To Capitol Police Will Be Renewed

A new request will be made when the last deficiency bill comes before the House Appropriations Committee for money to hire ten trained policemen to augment the patronage force of Capitol police, it was learned yesterday.

Kenneth Romney, House sergeant at arms, asked for the appropriation in the legislative supply bill, but was refused on the ground of economy.

House leaders, however, have expressed alarm in recent weeks at the prospect that a special detail of G-men, assigned to the Capitol during the special session because of the war scare, might be withdrawn.

Stork Rushes Girl In on Census, But Boy Is 9 Minutes Late

Nurse Isabel Loucks holds Baby Neill, born to Mr. and Mrs. Voris P. Neill in Garfield Hospital at 12:10 a. m. Monday, just nine minutes too late to be counted in the 1940 census

A seven-pound girl was born just in time to be included "in" on the 1940 census, it was learned yesterday, while a boy born at the same hospital exactly one hour later can blame the stork for having to wait 10 more years before getting his name on Uncle Sam's census list.

Just making the deadline was the 7-pound daughter born to Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sample, of 3500 Fourteenth street northwest, at 11:10 p. m. Sunday, in Garfield Hospital. Missing the count by 9 minutes was a boy, weighing 5 pounds 12 ounces, born to Mr. and Mrs. Voris P. Neill, of 936 Independence avenue southwest, also at Garfield. Anyway, the boy, who was born at 12:10 a. m. Monday, had the consolation of being the first April Fool baby.

The deadline was at 12:01 a. m. Monday, according to Frank Wilson of the publicity staff of the Census Bureau. This was to include all living persons in the United States as of 1 minute after April 1 began.

The idea was pictured in the abstract something like this, according to the census bureau's explanation:

The census enumerators who went on the job yesterday had to visualize the country "stopping dead" at 12:01 a. m. Monday. It was their job to sort to take "a still photograph" exactly at this moment before anyone else is born or anyone dies.

Anyone who died after 12:01 a. m., by the way, still gets his name included on the census, since he was alive at the time of the deadline. Anyone who died just before 12:01, likewise, fails to get the posthumous award of inclusion on the country's most ambitious census list.

No cases were ascertained where anyone died in Washington yesterday at any moment near the deadline that would have caused confusion in the minds of the census enumerators.

Izaak Walton League Enjoys Tender Dish of Mountain Lion

Nothing broke the silence but the clink of knives and forks, an occasional surreptitious smack or two, a few gusty sighs of delight. The Monday Luncheon Club of the Izaak Walton League was at it again in the Neptune Room.

Their delicacy, well done though it was, was rare. It was smothered in a curiously pungent Finnish sauce. It tasted somewhere between pork and chicken. It was so tender it melted beneath the gentlest pressure of the dullest fork.

It was roast mountain lion.

The idea and the lion came from Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey, who had it shot by one of Uncle Sam's predatory game hunters in Oregon. William A. VanDuzer, director of traffic, took the first gingerly bite, then gave the other 40 luncheners the green light.

While the lion was something new at the club's luncheons, the general scheme was an old one. The Izaak Waltoners and their guests have gone down the line before this for weirder dishes than mountain lion.

A couple of weeks ago they had 140 pounds of muskrat kittens from Cambridge, Md. Two or three months ago they sat down to buffalo from Oklahoma. Several weeks ago they lunched on prairie dog from the Western plains. Once they tried out starling for which they did not have to go so far afield.

Next fall they'll take a fling at rattlesnake steaks from Uvalde, Tex., home of the Vice President. Delaying until fall is not mere whimsy.

"They're better then," said DeWitt Harry, club president. "Now they're not so rich and tasty."

Welsh Hold Songfest

Citizens of Welsh descent, who belong to Saint David's Society and the Women's Welsh Club, tried to catch up on their gusto for music last night.

At a joint meeting at Powell Junior High School, they heard soloists from their group sing hymns and folk songs—some in Welsh and some in English. The whole crowd joined in "Onward Christian Soldiers" and other songs. Then even when they adjourned to the lunchroom for tea and cake, someone started up a tune at the tables.

The soloists on the program were Wendell Alderson, baryfone; Mrs. Alderson, soprano; Mrs. Irvin L. Clark, soprano, and Mrs. Erbin G. Thomas who gave a talk on Welsh hymnology and then sang several songs.

Griffith Evans, president of the society, read a book review on the new novel, "How Green Was My Valley," by Richard Llewellyn, which has a Welsh background. Miss Jane Daniel, president of the Women's Welsh Club, reported on its activities, including its raising of funds to aid the home for aged Welsh men and women, in a suburb of Cleveland, Ohio.

STORE UP IRON for YOUR BLOOD
Get Vitamin B1 for your Nerves
When the body craves these vital elements, a rich supply can put color in your cheeks and help you feel like a new person WITHOUT ALCOHOL OR HABIT-FORMING DRUGS.
When your system is low in iron and Vitamin B1 many vital organs slow down—you often look pale, lose your appetite, get tired easily, sleep poorly, and feel nervous and played out. Iron helps make red blood, and red blood is vital for healthy muscles, healthy skin, healthy glands and healthy organs. Iron-poor blood may cause low vitality, heart palpitations, shortness of breath, swollen ankles and frequent periods of ill health.
You need Vitamin B1 and if you don't have enough Vitamin B1 you may get a painful neuritis, stomach upsets, constipation, weak appetite, mental depression, restless sleep.
In these conditions, take ENRICH, the thrilling new tonic that tastes like juice of wild berries and gives you more iron every day than 6 lbs. of spinach or 6 lbs. of raisins; more Vitamin B1 daily than ¾ lb. of baker's yeast. Your pep comes back with a bounce when you restore missing iron and Vitamin B1 and you eat more, stop worrying, and sleep better. Right in this neighborhood, many men, women and children feel keen and lead happier lives, through the help of ENRICH. Don't wait. ENRICH costs only a few cents a day. Change Asked In System Of Parole

Commissioners Favor Transfer Of Authority To Federal Board

The District Commissioners yesterday submitted to Congress a bill to amend the indeterminate sentence and parole act and the penal code to bring them into conformity with the Federal laws.

The major change would give the Federal parole board jurisdiction over District prisoners who have been transferred to a penal institution under jurisdiction of the Justice Department. The Federal board also would have authority to revoke a parole granted by the District board.

Another proposed amendment would require that the courts impose a minimum sentence that is not more than one-third of the maximum sentence.

The Commissioners said that under existing law the time between minimum and maximum sentences often was too short.

"In fact," the Commissioners said, "there are instances where the maximum sentence, when reduced by the allowance of good time, expires before the prisoner has served his maximum sentence."

Among numerous amendments to the penal code is a provision to take away from police court judges authority to determine the good time allowance for misdemeanor offenders. This control would be shifted to the Justice Department under the amendment.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, yesterday introduced a bill to specify one police court judge to act as a full-time traffic court judge.

Schulte explained he was opposed to the rotation of police court judges in traffic matters. Too often, he said, defendants try to get their cases postponed until a "lenient" judge is on the bench.

The bill also gives the traffic court authority to revoke or suspend driving permits following convictions for any traffic offense.

Utility Stock Issue Approved

An application by the Washington Gas Light Co. for authority to issue and sell 24,000 shares of cumulative convertible preferred stock was approved yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

A group of local underwriters will purchase the 24,000 shares of preferred stock, the company said, for resale to the public—subject to preferential rights of common stockholders—at not less than $103 per share.

10,000 See Rawson Take Inaugural at Bowie

12-Day Meet Opens Season In Maryland

Winner of Feature Pays $5.40 Ticket; Favorites Run Well On Opening Program

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., April 1.—The name "Bedwell," as much a part of the Bowie track as the eighth pole, figured prominently today as thoroughbred horse racing returned to the East for a 12-day stand at this point. Rawson, a 3-year-old son of Sun Flag, racing in the colors of H. G. (Guy) Bedwell, the father, finished a head in front of Ringie, saddled by L. G. (Buster) Bedwell, the son. A neck away from second money came the Millsdale Stable's Millfang.

Ringie, owned by Gustave Ring, Washington contract builder and sportsman, closed with a mighty rush that barely missed getting the camera decision in the field of six going the 5½ furlongs. Rawson was a slight favorite over Millfang at a $5.40 mutuel and was the fourth choice to win in five events.

10,000 See Inaugural

Seldom, if ever, has a Bowie opening been marked by better weather or more enthusiasm. A crowd of 10,000, the majority arriving early, kept long lines in front of the windows and the success of the heavily played horses stimulated the wagering.

Rawson, claimed by Bedwell from the Shandon Farms, has a reputation as a speed horse, but also is a noted quitter. However, the abbreviated sprint route was right up his alley, although he almost tossed off the main portion of the purse.

The young gelding, under the care of Jockey H. Lindberg, worked his way to the first flight at once. Millfang also had early speed and the two worked along as a team to the stretch. Woodchopper, representing Mrs. Elmer Truman, of Washington, raced between the pair for a quarter, and then dropped back. In the meanwhile, Ringie was well back and going to the outside for racing room.

As the field reached midstretch, Rawson had opened what appeared to be a safe lead on Millfang and

Wasdell Stars As Nats Beat Sanford, 15-0

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Sanford, Fla., April 1.—Jimmy Wasdell's anemic spring batting average today found the proper tonic—the class D pitching of the Sanford Club of the Florida State League. The Nats' little first baseman blossomed this afternoon as Home Run Wasdell.

He pumped a pair of homers over the distant rightfield wall of Sanford's mangy old park to feature Washington's 15-0 victory over the Florida eaguers. Wasdell drove in seven of the Nats' runs.

His first contribution was the acme of slugging performance—a homer with the bases full, in the seventh inning. It was no bunt. It cleared the fence, 350 feet distant, with yards to spare—a low trajectory clout that was no less than magnificent.

An inning later, Wasdell produced homer No. 2. It was a comparative slump. This time only two men were on base. But the sock he delivered was even lustier than his previous homer. It was a tremendous wallop to deep right center

Trout Streams In Maryland Lure Nimrods

By the Associated Press

Frederick, Md., April 1.—Congressmen and businessmen alike forgot their troubles today in pursuit of sport at the opening of Maryland's trout fishing season.

Fishermen, up with the sun, were out in full force and having "fair luck," District Game Warden Benjamin F. Phebus reported.

Trying their luck on Little Hunting Creek as guests of Kingman Brewster, Washington attorney, at his lodge were:

Representative Marvin Jones (Democrat), of Texas; Representative Charles A. Halleck (Republican), of Indiana; Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia; Representative Frank O. Horton (Republican), of Wyoming, and William Kelly and James Horton, members of the Federal Trade Commission.

Nearby at the lodge of Lawrence Richey, who was secretary to the former President Herbert Hoover, were:

McDowell Floored In Sixth, Comes Back With Rush; Verdict Unanimous

By Al Hailey

Knocked for a somersault in the sixth round, Wild Bill McDowell, of Dallas, Tex., came off the canvas and fought his way to an upset victory over Washington's Phil Furr in a fierce slugging spree before the first sell-out house in more than a year last night at Turner's Arena.

The curly-haired Texas welterweight took a count of nine after the knockdown, came off the floor still dizzy and then rallied with an attack that completely baffled the desperately-fighting Furr.

The fight was in doubt right up to the final bell and was won in the tenth round when McDowell turned on a two-handed attack that had Phil staggering. Phil caught McDowell with a left that knocked him skittering across the ring in the early part of the round, but the Texan came back to make Phil back up.

When Announcer Jimmy Lake boomed out "McDowell, by unanimous decision," 2,000 spectators gave it a rousing hand. Only a few scattered hisses greeted the verdict, although Furr's corner appeared to think the Washington fighter was the victim of a bad decision.

McDowell Takes First

McDowell rushed out and took the first round from the Washington veteran with a flurry of overhand rights to Phil's left eye that had his face a flaming crimson before the end of the round. Furr, in close, however, pounded McDowell's left kidney and under the heart and got out of trouble. Wild Bill showed a distinct dislike for body punishment.

Bill opened up the second with a terrific overhand right to Phil's battered eye, took a left hook on the right kidney and then slammed a straight left into Furr's other eye. Again Furr came in and worked on McDowell's body.

Then followed one of the wildest slugging sprees ever seen in the Arena. Phil drove slowly forward swinging both hands, trying to find a vulnerable spot about McDowell's body, but Wild Bill was jabbing Furr dizzy with a left and landing occasionally with that right.

One of the biggest ovations heard at Turner's Arena in several seasons shook the rafters after Norman Hurdman, Canadian welterweight, clowned, laughed and flirted with the crowd while pounding out a decision over Mayon Padlo, of Philadelphia.

It was the biggest upset of the

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Sanford, Fla., April 1.—For the first time since 1923, Earl Oliver Whitehill this year will not be wearing a big league uniform. The minors are beckoning, but not too enthusiastically.

Whitehill has been given the privileges of the Minneapolis camp at Daytona Beach and is trying to work himself into pitching condition there. That takes time for a fellow 40 years old. There is some sort of an understanding that if the sap begins to flow in his arm again, he can have a job with Minneapolis.

POVICH

Thus he'll be back where he started 20 years ago—in the minors. For Whitehill, particularly, it will be hard to take. The fellow is not of the usual run of big league ball players, hoarding their money against the day when their time in the majors runs out. The Earl lived to the hilt. The Whitehills traveled in style. The house they built in Cedar Rapids was of mansion proportions. The taxes now are considerable.

With Minneapolis, the salary he can command won't please him. At best he can expect the $600 a month which is the American Association salary limit per player. But minor league club owners don't pay top money to 40-year-old men who ask for jobs. On Whitehill, there is no chance for a resale by Minneapolis at a profit. Minor league clubs prefer to give their jobs to younger players who might develop into salable chattles.

In 1934, Whitehill was a $15,000-a-year man with Washington. The Nats had just won the pennant and the chunky southpaw with the most beautiful haircomb in the big leagues, was the most important factor in that pennant triumph. In 1933, he hit his peak pitching year. In his ten previous years in the big leagues, with a strong hitting club like Detroit, Whitehill had never been able to achieve more than 17 victories in any season. In 1933, he unloaded 22 wins for the Nats against only eight defeats.

There never was any question of the old boy's courage. In 1933, in the World Series against the Giants, he won Washington's only victory of that series. His was an inspiring job that afternoon. The Giants' hitters who had knocked Washington pitchers out of the box in the first three games he stopped cold. He beat 'em with a five-hit shutout performance.

Ten years with the Tigers, four with Washington, two with Cleveland and one with the Cubs is the record Whitehill leaves behind in the majors. Back in '33, Washington bought him for a specific purpose—his ability to beat the Yankees. He beat 'em for the Nats consistently that year. He went to Cleveland in '37 in a three-cornered deal that also involved the White Sox, and pitched .500 ball for two seasons. Last year he found a haven with the Cubs but could win only four games. He got his unconditional release during this winter.

At the winter meeting in Cincinnati, Whitehill was shopping around for a job in company with other back-sliding big league veterans. Al Simmons landed a berth with his old manager, Connie Mack, but no such luck befell Whitehill. He left Cincinnati jobless and thus far no major club has displayed an interest in him. The cruelest blow fell the other day at Daytona Beach when Clark Griffith merely wished him luck. In another year, the Nats might have taken on Whitehill. But this season Griffith is youth-minded to the extent that it is a near-obsession with him.

The Nats turned Whitehill down despite Bucky Harris' willingness to sign him. "I'd like to have him," Harris said. "Whitehill might not win for us, but he'd be in there trying. He has more fight and gameness than too many other pitchers on this club. He'd lend some fire to our club."

That's what Whitehill was, a fiery sort. He was unforgetiable that day in St. Louis when the Nats were fighting the Yankees for the 1933 pennant. Washington was entraining for Chicago and a veteran catcher remarked, "Well, we did pretty good taking three out of four from the Browns."

"Pretty good, hell," shouted Whitehill. "We ought to be ashamed of ourselves losing a game to the Browns. The Yanks are moving in here next and they'll take the Browns for four straight. You gotta lick the tail out of these tail-end clubs if you want to win the pennant."

That's the way he'll be in the minor leagues—fuming at defeat. Minneapolis, or whichever club signs him, may not be pitched to any pennant by the old fellow, but he'll never surrender a ball game.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 1.—A distinguished representative of the society of bleeding hearts—in other words, a bookmaker—charged with great justification today that an untold amount of money would still be bet with bookies at the New York mutuel tracks this season and that the tracks and legislators automatically gypped the New York betting public of a half a million dollars when they rejected Herbert Bayard Swope's proposal to pay the betters down to the last Penny that they win.

CONSIDINE

"How are they going to stop those big New York betters from placing bets with bookies at the tracks?" the bookie, who wanted to be anonymous, demanded. "I had a client last year who bet me as much as $2,500—every race on the program. He's a shrewd, responsible businessman. Now do you suppose that this year he is going to dump that money into the pari-mutuel machines? Of course he's not—for the moment he does his dough evaporates $250, what with the track and the State divvying up 10 per cent of it.

"Perhaps it evaporates another 2 per cent, when you take into consideration the fact that a horse he bets $2,500 on might pay $3.98, for every $2 he bets. Then he loses . . . Lemme see . . . $4 on every $100 he bets, for the State and tracks split up those 8-odd pennies. They say they do this for the convenience of the betters, to save them from handling pennies. That's a hot one. In the case of this man the State and the track would have gypped him one of $100, besides slicing 10 per cent off his dough when he fed it into the machine.

"As I said the fellow is too good a businessman to pay that much of a penalty to make a bet. HeH's going to do like nearly every other big New York better will. He's going to have his bookie at the track and he's going to make bets in code . . . Oh, in $50 different ways. He might make silent bets just by the way he wears his hat, or the way the handkerchief is hanging out of his pocket. He'll find some way to do it, and so will the others. And so will the bookies.

"Me? I'm through. If New York is sap enough to go for the machines, they can have them. But watch what it does to baseball, particularly if the Yanks get out to a big lead about midway in he season. Watch what it does to a lot of people who never should bet, too. Seventy per cent of the betting will be at the $2 windows, and half of the betters won't be able to afford it."

The bookmaker, who spent much time this winter at Hialeah, says that millions of dollars were bet there with bookies, and none of it ever went into the machines—where the track and the State of Florida could get their bits.

"They caught a few of them," he related. "Fined them $100 and kicked them off the premises. But they were back the next day, with a new system for taking bets."

Terps' Nine Scores Over Vermont

Stickmen Swamp Dartmouth, 12-4; Mondorff Pitches Six-Hit Baseball

Behind the six-hit pitching of Pershing Mondorff, Maryland's baseball team slugged out a 16-2 win over Vermont yesterday at College Park. It was the Terps' second straight victory against two losses.

The Terps collected 19 hits off the combined offerings of two Vermont pitchers. In the second inning 11 men teed off on Anse Belardinelli, Vermont right-hander, to drive seven runs over the plate on six hits, a walk and an error. The Old Liners added another two runs in the third frame on singles by Maisel, Culver and Bengoechea. Belardinelli retired in favor of Akley after the first stanza in which Maryland scored four more runs from five hits, an error and a hit batsman.

The Green Mountain boys were unable to push over a run against the sharp-breaking curve and whizzing fast ball of Mondorff until the fifth. Bengoechea's error and Sysko's single did the trick.

Terp Lacrossemen Rout Dartmouth, 12-4

With Bill Slesinger scoring the first four goals, the University of Maryland lacrosse team won its first match of the season yesterday, defeating Dartmouth, 12-4, at College Park.

Showing improvement in every department over their losing performance in their opener last week against Mount Washington, the defending national intercollegiate champions amassed a 6-1 lead at half. Oscar Nevares and Bill Bond were the scorers besides Slesinger.

Leap Golfers Open Season With Cornell

College and schoolboy golfers will flock to a half-dozen local courses today for team competition and tryouts.

Maryland University golfers open a heavy schedule by entertaining Cornell at Beaver Dam, while at Capital—Coach Tony Sylvester will hold tryouts to determine the last three members of the Georgetown golf team. The rounds were scheduled yesterday, but postponed.

The first-round matches in the schoolboy golf leagues are scheduled, two in the inter-high division and three in the Metropolitan section.

Wilson will meet Western at Kenwood, and Anacostia and McKinley play at Washington. Bethesda's defending champions in the Met section play Bladensburg at Manor, while St. John's, returning to the league, plays Devitt Prep at Army and Navy, and Gonzaga and Blair meet at Beaver Dam. All matches start at 3 p. m.

Bobby Brownell, lost to the Duke golf team with a broken leg, is home for spring vacation on crutches, and with his leg in a cast. The District's No. 1 ranking golfer will be out of golf until fall, according to his doctor.

No. 13—Washington Golf and Country Club

'The Hardest Hole on the Course'

The penalty for overshooting the sixth hole at Washington Golf and Country Club is a shot that confronts Charles Loy (extreme right) and that would test Benny Hogan. The object is to get back on the green by just pretending the trees aren't even there

Washington Club's Sixth Hole Picked As Course's Hardest

This is another of a series on the 19 golf clubs in Metropolitan Washington where the professional selects the hardest hole on the course. The twentieth and concluding story will deal with the hardest of the lot, from a consensus of opinion.

The accompanying picture should be a warning not to overshoot the sixth green at Washington Golf and Country Club, for your face may be like Charley Loy's, who was a bit too bold on his approach, and you see the result.

The tremendous drop over the green, the half-dozen traps to the left, woods to the right and the tightly bound tee shot swayed Professional Dave Thomson's opinion to the 374-yard par 4 sixth hole as hardest on the course.

We were a trifle surprised when Dave mentioned No. 6 as toughest on the woody and hazardous layout, for the 451-yard par 4 third, the seventh and eight, both more than 425-yard par 4s, and the 234-yard par 3 fourteenth would have been our immediate choices.

But Dave clinched his argument when we walked out to the sixth, and had to wait for a twosome to complete the hole, and they were having plenty of trouble. One of them had pushed his second shot into the woods to the right and in blasting out hit the ball too hard and it went down over the trap back of the green and into the fourth fairway, as in the picture.

The shot back up to the green

Cliff Spencer Double Winner in Baltimore

Takes Pro Sweepstakes, Pairs With Shorey In Pro-Pro Play at Rolling Road Course; Eight Tournaments Awarded District Clubs

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Catonsville, Md., April 1.—Cliff Spencer's workouts on the winter tour gave the East Potomac professional the edge here today over the Rolling Road course as he and Mel Shorey, of Indian Spring, tied in a pro-pro best ball tourney and the former led the pro sweepstakes with a one-over-par 71.

Spencer started his round with a birdie and climaxed it on the sixteenth hole when he drove out of bounds but holed a shot out of a trap for a par four. He threeputted two greens, and Shorey helped a stroke to gain the best ball tie. Alec Taylor, host pro and Leo Fraser, manager and former professional at the Sea View Club, played each nine in par 35 for the tying 70.

Ralph Beach, Middle Atlantic P. G. A. president, released a 15-event tournament schedule at a meeting that preceded the golf. Eight of the tournaments will be played over local courses, including the Grosner match play pro-amateur, with an added purse, scheduled September 30, October 1-2 at Manor Club.

Al Houghton received the first official prom-am of the year, April 22, at Beaver Dam, the first and only tournament before the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. championship April 26-27, at Old Point Comfort, Va.

Pro-Amateurs where the simonpures receive handicaps were awarded Belle Haven and Bradley Hills, while events where the amateurs play from scratch will be played at Kenwood and Indian Spring. The pros will play with Burning Tree members on August 26, while a pro-am is pending, on

Hoyas, Cards Begin Spring Grid Drills

G. U. Optimistic, C. U. Pessimistic About 1940 Season

By Jack Munhall.

One highly optimistic and the other fully as pessimistic, Georgetown and Catholic Universities yesterday opened spring football practice with comparatively small squads as other activities claimed many of the gridmen.

The Hoyas, due to lose only five dependables by graduation and other routes and having a powerful freshman squad to fill the holes, naturally expects another banner season. Against a more difficult schedule Jack Hagerty's team may not roll on to its third successive undefeated season but Georgetown again figures to be among the Eastern leaders.

Conversely the Cardinals drag out their pads confronted with their bleakest outlook in many years. From the 1938-39 team which established an all-time school scoring record of 272 points and earned a Sun Bowl invitation C. U. will miss most of the brightest stars.

Pirros Are Gone

Gone will be the matchless brother combination of Fullback Rocco Pirro and Tackle Carmen Pirro; Cocapt. Al Calabrese and Art Sabo, the finest pair of guards in C. U. history; Halfbacks Joe Guyon and Frank Krawczell; Quarterbacks Leo Dunn and Johnny Fierellino; Center Pete Osinski, Fullback Nick Sarelas and End Vic Miller and Louis Shine.

Under the most favorbale circumstances, the loss of so many and such capable players would be a staggering blow to Coach Dutch Bergman, but when he must rebuild from a frsehman squad of only 12, then the full seriousness of his task is driven home.

Nucleus for the 1940 C. U. edition will be Linemen Joe Conlen, Julius Stanges, Johnny White, Joe Carrig, Mike Cherello, Casmir (Sneeze) Kyscewski and Moe Schulman, and Backs Hank Brostek, Pete Sachon, Charley Houtenot, Hank Sant' Ambrogio, Al Norris and Bill Griffith.

The one small ray of sunshine leaking through the thick veil of gloom at Brookland right now is the anticipation of a remarkably good first string backfield. The combination of All-District Sachon at quar-

Big Print Shop New Champion Of Graphic Arts Pin League

Judd & Detweiler Team Is Nosed Out in Final Matches; Gooding Stars for Losing Team

Jack Gooding's 154 game and 412 set led the defending champion Judd and Detweiler team to a final spurt in the Graphic Arts League at Lucky Strike, but the rally fell a game short and Big Print Shop won the pennant. Bud Jones rolled 143-394 as Progressive Printing climbed into third place. Judd and Detweiler rolled 593 and 1,764.

Ida Weinberg's season record set of 375 and Ruth Moran's 135 game led the champion Wacs in the Whats-in-A-Name League, as the team posted a 561 game and a season's record 1,585 set. The scores were good for two wins over Commerce.

Station Engineers rolled team totals of 631 and 1,678 in winning three over Distribution in the Kilowatt League at Lucky Strike. Hodgson was high with 152-393.

Wise Brothers regained first place in the Electrical League by winning three over Western Electric. Eddie Fodazk was best with 145-378.

ARCADIA

Hydros topped the Navy Department League teams at Arcadia with 640-1,792 game and set, led by Andy Price with 399. Gerald Small had high game of 157 for Secretaries.

Hampton Show Judges Revealed

J. North Fletcher, of Warrenton, Va., and Forrest L. Ward, of Hollins, Va., have accepted invitations to judge at the Hampton Horse Show, which will be held at Hampton, April 19 and 20.

Entries are being received from all of the Old Dominion's top show stables, for the Hampton fixture is the first recognized horse show on the circuit and exhibitors are anxious to use it as schooling for their young horses.

The event is being managed by George Poehlman, of Warrenton, who is handling the entries.

District A.A.U. Mat Tourney Is Set

The District of Columbia A. A. U. wrestling championships will be held Friday and Saturday in the boys' gym of the Central Y. M. C. A. in junior and senior classes, it was announced yesterday.

Entries in both classes close tomorrow at 8 p. m., with R. B. Morgan, chairman of the D. C. A. A. U. wrestling committee at the Y.

Weighing in for juniors will be held between 4 and 8 p. m. tomorrow, and seniors will weigh in before their matches Friday and Saturday between 5 and 6 p. m.

Jim McNamara, Jewish Community Center physical instructor; R. B. Morgan, of the Y. M. C. A.; Roy Engel, of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club; Tom Clayton, of Devitt A. C.; Charles Reynolds, of the Boys' Club, and Philip Bernstein, of Merrick, will be among the competitors for the titles.

Annual Heurich Banquet Set For Tomorrow

The annual Heurich Amateur Basketball League banquet is scheduled for Heurich gymnasium tomorrow night at 7 o'clock when the circuit celebrates one of the most successful seasons in its history.

A team trophy will be presented the champion United Typewriters and individual gold basketballs will reward its players.

A foul shooting contest involving one outstanding player from each team is slated and also a long-range shooting contest. In a deathless individual foul duel Messrs. Wheaton, of the Petworth A. C., and Cooke, of Delhuds, are to clash.

Good merchandise finds a ready buyer

Maybe we at El Producto are old-fashioned in the matter of making claims. During the quarter of a century our policy has been to put the superlatives into the cigar . . . rather than into advertising. We have been more concerned with making improvements than in talking about them.

Thus, as a matter of course, El Producto Cigars get better and better as the years go by. No radical changes . . . but a succession of improvements that mean finer cigars—choicer quality, better workmanship, greater real enjoyment; in short, more for your money.

Evidently you like our way of doing business, and the quality it has made possible . . . because you have made El Producto the leading high-grade cigar. Many of El Producto's shapes and sizes are the largest selling cigars in their group. For instance, our Puritanos Finos is the largest selling two-for-a-quarter cigar in America. However, all El Producto's shapes and sizes are of but one quality . . . the very finest it is possible to produce.

El Producto originally was introduced "for real enjoyment." That pledge has been kept . . . and will be kept, always.

Workman, D. C. Jockey, Signs to Ride for A. G. Vanderbilt

Will Resume Saddle Work At the Graw

Deal Is Closed at Bowie After Weeks Of Dickering; Owner Shaken Up in Crash

By a Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., April 1.—Raymond (Sonny) Workman, veteran Washington jockey, announced late today that he has signed a contract with Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt for the remainder of the 1940 season. The Northeast Washington boy and the wealthy sportsman closed the deal in the clubhouse here. Vanderbilt was slightly shaken up in an auto accident in Baltimore this morning but came to the track anyway and signed Workman between the second and third races.

"We have been trying to reach an agreement for several weeks," Workman said, "and Mr. Vanderbilt finally made me an offer that I could not resist."

Jockey Overweight

The Capital rider spent the winter months in Miami but he did not participate in racing, golf being his chief interest. He appears in good condition, although several pounds over his riding weight. Workman said that Vanderbilt would not start horses until the Havre de Grace meeting and that he expected to be riding in the closing day of that session.

Workman, who rode Equipoise, will give special attention to a large group of juveniles in the Vanderbilt stable. Although the bad weather has retarded these juveniles, they will be out in full force at Pimlico. This is the second time Workman has had a contract with the president of the Pimlico and Belmont tracks. With Alfred Robertson, Workman rode for the C. V. Whitney stable. He learned to ride at the Benning, D. C., track.

Will Ride in Oaks

One of Workman's mounts will be Now What, champion 2-year-old filly of last season. Now What is expected to make her first start in the $10,000 added Pimlico Oaks run during the Maryland Jockey Club meeting.

When the Maryland spring season is completed, the Vanderbilt horses will be shipped to New York. Other stake performers which Workman will ride for the Sagamore Stable are Nedayr and Impound.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN GINGER, $5.50, $3.70, $2.90; DISTANT STAR, $5.60, $4.10; ALL GRAY, $5.60.

SUN GINGER, off in the first flight and rated along close to the leaders to midstretch, responded gamely when placed to hand ride and drew clear with some speed in reserve. DISTANT STAR was rushed up on the outside to forge in front of ALL GRAY, but weakened slightly nearing the end. ALL GRAY was sent to contention under hustling tactics on the inside and tired under a drive in the final stages. PEACE DAY showed an even effort.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:09. Off at 3:09. Winner, C. S. Jennings' b. f. (4), by Economic—Mint Dinah. Trained by C. Reilly. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:08⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLABLAH, $5.80, $3.50, $3.10; AUTUMNQUEST, $7.60, $5.80; REMOLEE, $17.90.

BLABLAH, going in best form, assumed command at once, shook off the early challenge of SUN SALVATOR and drew out to win easily. AUTUMNQUEST, not hurried in the early stages, closed with excellent energy. REMOLEE was rushed to contention at once, saved ground, but was tiring at the end. SQUARE PLAY showed a good effort.

Daily Double, SUN GINGER and BLABLAH, Paid $13.90.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:42. Off at 3:42. Winner, L. W. Ulmer's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEEL KNIGHT, $7.70, $4.80, $3.50; SCHLEY GOREE, $18.90, $10.00; AFFIRMATION, $4.40.

STEEL KNIGHT, prominent from the start, forged to the front approaching the turn and held on gamely under a hard drive. SCHLEY GOREE saved ground on the swing to the stretch to improve position and held on with good energy in the final drive. AFFIRMATION was hard ridden and came willingly at the close. SCARLET O. went evenly on the outside. LADY ORCHID had speed to take an early lead and weakened gradually thereafter.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:13. Off at 4:13. Winner, H. G. Bedwell's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—APPREHEND, $12.80, $6.50, $4.50; STAIRS, $7.20, $5.50; DULIE, $5.60.

APPREHEND, forwardly placed on the outside from the beginning, responded willingly to pressure to take command in the early stretch and was kept to a drive to the end. STAIRS, slow to begin, improved his position and was closing on the winner at the end. DULIE was a forward factor throughout and showed a good effort. WHITE COCKADE appeared sore going to post and weakened after racing with PRINCE TURLEY in front. EPICAL had no excuses.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,200; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:41. Off at 4:41. Winner, H. G. Bedwell's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RAWSON, $5.40, $3.70, $2.50; RINGIE, $9.30, $3.60; MILLFANG, $2.70.

RAWSON set the pace, accompanied by MILLFANG, drew out in the stretch run, but weakened suddenly inside the eighth pole and just lasted under a hard drive. RINGIE lacked early speed, came to the outside for racing room and closed full of run to be going fastest. MILLFANG forced the early pace and was tiring at the close. WOOD CHOPPER had good early speed while racing between horses and weakened gradually.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:11. Off at 5:11. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' b. or br. g. (6), by Prince Pal—Salvation Lass. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:51.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—UVALDE, $4.70, $3.30, $2.40; KNOXVILLE, $5.20, $3.50; FRANK BROOKE, $2.70.

UVALDE, allowed to settle into his best stride and, rated while racing on the inside to the far turn, came out for racing room and, under strong handling, was up in the concluding strides. KNOXVILLE, well placed from the start, came gamely when placed to pressure, but could not resist the winner. FRANK BROOKE was rated close to FLAG ETTA'S pace, but weakened in the closing test. FLAG ETTA had keen speed while setting the pace, but stopped through the stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:40. Off at 5:40. Winner, P. Bieber's b. m. (6), by Supremus—Ancient QQueen. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:50⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—THE QUEEN, $11.00, $7.00, $4.30; HOWARD, $7.50, $4.80; HEAD HUNTER, $3.80.

THE QUEEN, rated while closest to the pace of DARK MAY, took command when asked and drew out sharply in the closing eighth. HOWARD, well placed from the start, came to the outside for racing room and closed gamely, but was no match for the winner. HEAD HUNTER moved up menacingly in midstretch and then faltered. DARK MAY was used up setting the pace and stopped. MOLASSES BILL closed gamely. BRANDON PRINCE was made much use of early and tired.

Selections at Bowie.

Dear Al:

If you saw John A. Manfuso smiling broadly as he came to the clubhouse to the paddock after yesterday's second race, it wasn't because he had just hit the daily double.

The popular Washington owner was happy because he had just received word that his mare, En Passant, had dropped a fine colt foal by Aneroid down in Kentucky. In fact, Aneroid now has six colts and three fillies on their tiny hoofs and rarin' to go. En Passant, little raced herself but excellently bred, is the dam of Accidental, Mrs. Manfuso's game filly. You all know how I stand on Aneroid's prospects as a stud. But it seems a long time to wait until his get is on the track. I talked to Jockey Sammy Palumbo, the half mile champion yesterday. He's looking good and says the wife and baby are doing fine. Sammy will manage the jockey's baseball team at Charles Town again this year. Porkchops was conspicuous by his absence. Poke is going to school at Fredericksburg, Va. We'll catch him at Charles Town. Nick Wall, one of the better riders, got i from the West Coast. He will ride out the Maryland season and has given first call to W. L. Warner, the California owner. Jockey Al Schmidl arrived to take over the saddle work for the Motor City Stable which wintered its horses at Bennings. Tony Pelleteri checked in with the Millsdale horses. He has six here and 24 others over at Laurel. Jockey Glen Smith is here after campaigning at Oaklawn Park. "Jockey No Boy" Jacobs is back. He "ain't doing no good." As usual. He's been sick, father has been sick, couldn't get any egg rolls for the press box sandwiches and his betting roll is nothing to brag about. But he's still tops in everybody's book as a handy man. The only thing Art Brown hit yesterday was the organ at the Capitol. He did bat his gums a bit in the morning. Confucius say: Brilliant One is fast one. BILL.

First race—Brown Flower, racing for Marshall Field on the Florida circuit, has come to hand very nicely in late races. Hy-Happy raced at Santa Anita and shapes up as the sharpest contender. Mud Lover makes his debut, but is rated a good chance.

Second race—Belle High failed to impress her backers in recent races at Santa Anita but whipped better-grade platers early this winter. She stands out as the class here. Busy Fingers was away poorly in her last race at Hialeah but performed creditably in other trials at that point. Hi-Kid is in form but carries plenty of weight.

Third race—Bully Time was no match for such as Endy and Potrance at Oaklawn last start, but previous races indicate she has the speed to whip this field. Hazel W., away since last fall, will be the one to beat if fit. Knitetta raced well on the Bowie strip last year and deserves consideration.

Fourth race—Airflame failed to show his usual burst of speed in two efforts at Santa Anita. He meets cheaper company in today's encounter and provided his rumored bad underpinning does not bother him, he should register at this distance. The Ring entry of Como No and Charlotte Girl comprise a hard-hitting pair, both having raced well in Florida. Toddle On may cause trouble.

Fifth race—Presidential accounted for his last two heats at Hialeah, competing against platers of better caliber. He shapes up as the best bet of the day. Greedan, second in two starts at New Orleans, is in form and figures best of the others. Crius might better a poor showing in his recent Oaklawn outing.

Sixth race—High Tension has been freshened up during the winter and meets a mediocre field of platers in this heat. Needs only be fit to win. Personable performed well at Oaklawn in cheap company and will enjoy the advantage of recent racing. Breezing Along receives a good figure.

Seventh race—Filandro indicated top form by several in-the-money finishes in Florida races. He comes from a smart outfit and is one of the few fit horses in the field. New Deal has some class but may need a race. Ellacaw displayed fair effort at New Orleans and may be close.

Best bet—Presidential.

10,000 Watch Rawson Take Bowie Feature

12-Day Meet Launches Season in Maryland; Favorites Run Well

Ringie had gathered momentum. But Rawson had little left for the remainder of the route. Jockey Lindberg went to work on him and it was a question whether he would last. Millfang also was tiring, but not as much as the leader. With a few jumps to go, Ringie came with his brilliant effort. The three went into the wire together. Although the camera was used, the positions were no secret to those on the line.

The warm sun and strong wind had dried out the oval to a "good" condition and the 3-year-old winner was clocked in 1:07 4-5. Scratches took some of the kick out of the $1,200 affair, named the Bel Air Purse. Rough Pass, Yancey Christmas' Kentucky Derby hope, was scratched early while Jehoover and Son Altesse were withdrawn in the afternoon.

The favorite players got off to a flying start as the public choices accounted for the first three events on the card. Eddie Smith, Washington jockey, carried off the riding honors in the first race. He was aboard the Millsdale Stable's fleet Sun Ginger and the filly came from behind to win going away by two and a half lengths in a field of 11 maiden juveniles. District Star was second and All Gray, a paddock tip, was third. Sun Ginger, a recent arrival from California, paid $5.50.

Blablah Wins

O. S. Jennings' Blablah, making her first start of the year after working well, came bouncing home at $5.80 mutuel in the second race downing Autumnquest by four lengths. Remolee, a long shot, was a surprise third. Apprentice C. Durando rode the winner.

The third straight favorite to click was L. W. Ullmer's Steel knight which paid $7.70. Jockey Lucas Dupps gave the bright Knight horse a fine ride and he saved the day by a half length margin. The close second was Schley Goree, of half mile and Charleston fame. Affirmatoin was third in the blanket finish.

Two Reviews Note Optimism For Business

Slower Recession, More Irregularity Seen in Trade Trend

Although noting grounds for guarded optimism, two major surveys of business trends and forecasts for the next quarter yesterday agreed current facts fail to warrant any conclusion the prevailing downward trend in business has been reversed.

One of the surveys was released by the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York and the other by Dun & Bradstreet in comparative reviews of domestic and foreign trade, market factors and possible indications for the future.

"The rapid and continuous decline in business activity during the first two months of the year seems to have given way to a slower and more irregular recession in the last few weeks," the Guaranty Trust noted. "In some quarters, still more favorable tendencies are noted, with rates of operation leveling off or even moving into higher ground.

Readjustment Incomplete

"It would be premature to infer that the moderately encouraging developments of recent weeks mark the beginning of a definite reversal of trend. A reaction of such swiftness and severity does not ordinarily pass off so quickly, and the possibility must still be recognized that the readjustment is not yet by any means complete.

"Nevertheless, there is a manifest tendency in some business quarters to look toward the future with guarded optimism, particularly in view of the fact that the rate of consumption appears to have been well maintained and that only moderate decreases have been reported thus far in employment and pay rolls, suggesting that the aggregate purchasing power of consumers has not suffered sharp curtailment.

"To what extent the anticipated stimulus of war buying figures in these expectations is not entirely clear. Some widening has been noted recently in the scope of foreign demand for military supplies.

"The movement of railway freight declined more than seasonally last month and, on a seasonally adjusted basis, was the smallest since last August. Recent fluctuations have shown increasing irregularity, with the downward trend greatly moderated. The decline in electric power production was arrested in the latter part of February and has likewise given way to irregularity.

Spring Revival Missing

"The traditional spring revival in business has not yet made its appearance. Reports from trade and industry reveal a continuation of the spottiness which has been evident since the first of the year," said Dun & Bradstreet. "In industry, an increase in the number of orders suggested a broader buying base, although total volume failed to show any appreciable improvement.

"The trend of activity, as revealed by statistical indicators, was moderately lower during last week. Four out of five industrial indexes declined; one measurement of general business was down, and the other up only fractionally; the wholesale price average sagged mildly. In most instances, comparisons with a year ago were less favorable.

Weather Slows Spring Trade

"With the spring season less than half completed, retailers noted a definite post-Easter slump in buying this week. Weather conditions were said to be the main deterrent to sales expansion. Prices held strong on spring goods as merchants determined to prolong the regular selling season.

"The curve of industrial output sagged gently. Orders were more numerous than a month ago in some lines, but were not yet in large enough volume to halt the contraction in operating schedules. Buying policies continued to be directed to maintaining inventories at current levels. While neither price trends nor the problem of securing prompt delivery appeared to warrant increased covering of future needs, there was also nothing in the business or political news to encourage important inventory liquidation."

Foreign Trade Review

"The foreign trade of the United States has increased sharply in the last few months," the Guaranty Trust Co. review said. "This gain seems to have brought about an upward revision of expectations in some quarters regarding the probable stimulating effects of the war on foreign demand for American products. While recent developments may warrant some of this optimism, they emphasize also the many uncertainties still obscuring the outlook and suggest that the earlier caution on the part of those concerned was not misplaced.

"Marked changes have taken place also in the geographical distribution of our foreign trade. The most striking fact in this connection is that exports to neutral countries have increased more than those to belligerents. Among the belligerent countries, the greatest absolute gain has been in trade with Canada. Even the gain in Canadian trade, however, has been surpassed by that with Latin America, which in the first five months of the war, showed an export total 57 per cent above that a year earlier. Exports to Asia have increased considerably."

Steel Operations Increase Is Expected

New York, April 1 (AP).—Steel operations will rebound a full point to 61.7 per cent of capacity this week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. Last week operations were 60.7 per cent, a month ago 64.6 per cent and a year ago 54.7 per cent.

Mutual Insurance Companies Form Motor Cargo Pool

Washington Headquarters to Be Directed By William H. Rodda; Safety Education, Engineering Research to Be Part of Program

Formation of a multimillion dollar insurance pool to carry risks on large national trucking company cargoes was announced yesterday by the American Mutual Alliance on behalf of ten major mutual fire insurance companies with combined assets of $45,204,712.

WILLIAM H. RODDA

Headquarters of the cooperative venture will be maintained in Washington, under the direction of William H. Rodda, insurance engineer, with offices in the Shoreham Building, with the official title the Mutual Cargo Pool.

Rodda, explaining the reasons for the pool, set forth that the companies decided to cooperate because of a desire to handle larger cargo values and truck operations than any single company could afford to risk in the past as truck operations often were hazardous.

Engineering Investigations

Mutual Cargo Pool plans a safety division to promote safe driving and the education of drivers, probably with monthly awards to operators. Another part of the program will be engineering safety investigations and other research to reduce the traffic hazards in an effort to decrease the costs of insurance.

The syndicate is designed to meet the widened demand for motor cargo insurance which has grown out of recent Interstate Commerce Commission regulations requiring that interstate truckers protect cargoes by insurance, and out of the increasing insistence of State regulatory bodies that intrastate shipments be similarly protected.

The mutual companies which are members of the Mutual Cargo Pool have kept losses at a minimum in other hazardous lines—such as grain elevators and lumber mills—and emphasize loss prevention and safety activities.

ICC Regulations Rule

All applicants accepted will be required to comply with Interstate Commerce Commission safety regulations, governing equipment, lighting and working conditions for drivers, regardless of whether the applicant's operations come within the commission's jurisdiction.

The ten members of the pool are: Central Manufacturers Mutual Insurance Co., Van Wert, Ohio; Federal Mutual Fire Insurance Co., Boston; Grain Dealers National Mutual Fire Insurance Co., Indianapolis; Hardware Dealers Mutual Fire Insurance Co., Stevens Point, Wis.; Indiana Lumbermen's Mutual Insurance Co., Indianapolis; Minnesota Implement Mutual Fire Insurance Co., Owatonna, Minn.; National Retailers Mutual Insurance Co., Chicago; Union Mutual Fire Insurance Co., Providence, R. I.; United Mutual Fire Insurance Co., Boston, and Western Millers Mutual Fire Insurance Co., Kansas City.

The Washington office will serve as an underwriting and research bureau, with the individual companies writing the policies and handling the loss settlements through their present facilities.

Kellogg Food Net $3,437,130 In 33% Rise

Companies Generally Report Improvement Over 1938 Earnings

By the Associated Press

New York, April 1.—The Kellogg Co., Battle Creek, Mich., food manufacturers, reported today for 1939 net profit of $3,437,130, equal to $1.58 a share on the common stock. This compared with $2,175,580, or $1 a share in 1938.

Alleghany Corporation

Alleghany Corporation and wholly owned subsidiary, Terminal Shares, Inc., reported today net loss for 1939 of $1,015,230 after $123,197 expenses applicable to years prior to 1939. Net loss is exclusive of $20,383,751 net loss on sales of securities, and $10,993,466 provision for possible loss on sale of securities owned by Terminal Shares, Inc., and credit of $336,802 excess of principal amount over cost of bonds retired less unamortized discount and expense on such bonds. In 1938, net loss was $1,994,861, exclusive of $29,612,125 loss on sale of securities.

Miami Copper

Miami Copper Co., operating mines in Arizona, reported net profit for 1939 of $768,936, before depletion, or $1.03 a share. Some Issues Chalk Up 1940 Highs Despite Irregularity in Day's Trading And Close at Lower Levels in Many

New York, April 1.—The stock market closed irregularly lower today, but before it did it reached a new high on the recovery which started with the declaration of a dividend by the United States Steel Corporation. In this rise the market did not break through any important resistance point.

To break the market out of its present rut will take a number of other developments. At the moment they do not appear to be on the horizon. Business is not supplying anything to move the bullish forces and on the other side of the ledger are the uncertainties of a war abroad, a Presidential election year and a too even division between the favorable and the unfavorable in business indices.

The market today followed an irregularly lower course after some early strength. The composite average closed off 0.11 point with oils, store stocks and motors displaying firmness but other groups showing fractional declines. There was good support for a time for the air transportation issues.

The followers of business trends got some encouragement today from the weekly steel figures, which showed the industry operating at 61.7 per cent of capacity, a gain of one point from a week ago. The general trend of business remains downward, but the hope of the constructive forces is that a normal spring expansion will soon put in its appearance.

Radio claimed a major share of the tape today, being the day's most active stock, and advancing an eighth. McKesson & Robbins was the next in line, and on a half-point gain went to a new high for the year. All together there were 59 individual issues that reached new 1940 maximums. Curtiss-Wright, off a fraction, was the most active of the aviations. In the air transport field, United gained a fraction and Pan-American was up slightly while American Airlines featured with a jump of 3¼ points. Concerned Steel was a strong point, adding 1½. The soft drink issues were quieter than during last week, but were generally firm, advances being scored by White Rock and Loft. American Radiator was the favorite in the building group.

Bond Market Firm

New York, April 1.—All sections of the listed bond market were firm today, and dealings were somewhat more active than in previous weeks and months. Turnover was $7,140,000. United States Treasury issues were marked fractionally higher, but there was no evidence of selling from the Federal Reserve open portfolio to supply the demand. The Treasury list is at best figure, for the year and not much under historic highs. Best rated corporate issues were steady to firm.

Secondary rail liens and the default carrier bonds reflected persistent inquiry. Gains were mostly fractional, but they sufficed for the establishment of a few 1940 highs. Local traction bonds improved. Communications bonds were in demand, with Postal Telegraph 5s quite active. Some default bonds of industrial companies showed sizable gains.

Brazilian bonds were active in the foreign department, on expectations that the small payments promised by Brazil soon will be made. Other Latin-American default bonds showed modest improvement. Belligerent country issues moved fractionally higher, possibly because the war continues to be economic and diplomatic, rather than military. Scandinavian and other neutral bonds were dull.

Car Output Shows Gains In Quarter

Inventory Increases, Indicating Reduction In Plant Operations

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 1.—The motor car industry completed the first quarter of 1940 with a total production of 1,309,134 passenger cars and trucks, Ward's Automotive Reports says in its current issue. Last year the first three months accounted for 1,063,977 of the year's total output of 3,732,374 units.

The motor industry today began the second half of its 1940 model season with approximately 500,000 new vehicles in dealers' hands, in transit or awaiting shipment. This heavy inventory, say some sources, suggests the likelihood of a sharp curtailment of production in the near future.

Ward's Reports, however, says that present indications point to an April production of "around 450,000 cars," which would maintain the modest upward trend, last month's volume having totaled approximately 436,000 units. Assemblies during April a year ago were 354,266.

"Reports to the factories," the trade publication says, "indicated important improvement in retail sales during the second ten-day March period. After the very disappointing showing of the first third of the month, the second period's results were heartening, even though they failed to make up completely the volume sag which preceded it."

Noting the "completion of preliminary arrangements" for further war purchases, particularly in the aviation industry, the review suggests expansion in facilities can be expected.

Loan Increase Cited By Board

By the Associated Press

Commercial, industrial and agricultural loans increased last week for the sixth straight week.

Reporting on banks of 101 leading cities, the Federal Reserve Board said that this type of credit increased $4,000,000 to a total of $4,383,000,000 in the week ended March 27. This figure was $569,000,000 larger than a year ago.

Wholesale Sales Show Increase

Chicago, April 1.—An average gain of 14.6 per cent in February was reported in sales at wholesale by 3,218 lines in the home furnishings, apparel and building material fields in a survey by the Merchandise Mart Barometer of Wholesale Buying, announced today by Percy Wilson, managing director of the Merchandise Mart.

Principal home furnishings lines held to appreciable advantages borne up by record activity in furniture buying. Price slashes in the heavy appliances, however, depressed sales in the electrical and housewares fields.

Sales of furniture during February showed a 20.9 per cent gain over February, 1939. Floor coverings and upholstery fabrics gained 21 per cent.

Spring Wheat Price Increase Is Expected

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 1.—The best spring prices for wheat since 1930, except in 1937, today overshadowed as dismal a set of winter acreage and crop condition figures as experts ever have assembled in estimating the size of the new harvest.

In only two other spring seasons since 1900 has the outlook as to the amount of grain which will be ready for reapers early in the summer been poorer. As a result of last fall's drought, the principal trouble zone is in the Southwest—western Kansas and parts of Oklahoma and Texas as well as Nebraska—where the Nation's big surplus of hard winter wheat is grown.

The Chicago wheat price indicated producer income as a whole should not suffer. Above dollar wheat, due to the crop situation as well as war in Europe and Asia, is almost 40 cents higher than at this time last year and double the low prices of 1931 and 1932.

Grain men estimated that at current prices production of both winter and spring wheat could fall as low as 500,000,000 bushels and still have a potential market value as great as the 753,000,000 bushel 1938 crop.

A survey by the Santa Fe Railroad today said Kansas wheat has failed to improve as much as was expected and that half of the State's acreage might be abandoned.

Pork Prices Decline

Chicago, April 1 (AP).—Wholesale prices of fresh pork loins declined about 20 per cent during March, and lard prices also dropped, the Institute of American Meat Packers reported today in a review of the livestock and meat trade. Wholesale prices of most other fresh pork products showed little change.

Employes in Steel Get $70,847,000

New York, April 1 (AP).—The steel industry employed an average of 538,000 workers in February compared with 536,000 in January and 453,000 in February, 1939, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. Pay rolls amounted to $70,847,000.

Steel Plant to Expand

New York, April 1 (AP).—R. H. Norton, president of Acme Steel Co. told stockholders today the company is working on plans to enlarge its buildings and add machinery costing about $1,500,000. The program will be completed next fall, and was necessitated by development of some of the company's specialty lines. Plants are at Chicago and Riverdale, Ill.

Rail President Outlines Perils Before Lines

By the Associated Press

Wichita, Kans., April 1.—E. J. Engel, president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway system, asserted today the public must choose in the near future whether to continue the railroad as a major form of transportation or "retain a limited mileage which may have a general strategic importance."

The Santa Fe president spoke before the Western Petroleum Refiners Association.

Engel said increasing competitive forms of transportation, mounting taxes and costs of operation were adding to "the very great handicap under which railroads must now operate."

"Don't think that I underestimate the value of the automotive industry in all its forms to the oil industry and to the railroads," he said.

"I certainly do not, but what objection can there be to calling attention to facts we all face which may become of paramount importance even to you because railroad purchases are important to you and railroad service would be missed far more than the unthinkable realize."

Cotton Declines On Heavy Sales Dispite Textiles

New York, April 1 (AP).—The cotton futures market ranged lower today, despite large sales of gray goods in the Worth street district which were estimated at close to 25,000,000 yards.

Heavy selling credited to Bombay interests disclosed a limited demand consisting of trade, New Orleans and local operators, and the list showed little rallying power.

Midafternoon prices held declines of 9 points; May (old), 10.51; July (old), 10.30; December, 9.63.

Futures closed 6-9 lower.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures slid to new low prices for the season before steady buying late today. Final prices were 2 higher to 2 lower. Lower quotations were posted following weakness in hog prices. Sales totaled 60 lots; May, 6.48 bid; July, 6.48 bid; September, 6.50; October, 6.49. Crude oil was quoted nominally at 5½ cents a pound in the Southeast and Valley and 5¼ @5¾ in Texas.

Investment Counsel Directory Is Published

New York, April 1.—Publication of the first general manual and directory of the investment counsel field, under the title of "Who's Who in Investment Counsel," was announced today by Bishop's Service, Inc., 76 Beaver street. The manual is designed to provide investors, banks and other business organizations with a historical and biographical record of individuals in the investment counsel profession.

Grains Climb, Wheat Rising On Crop Data

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 1.—Wheat price gains of as much as 1⅜ cents, which were cut in half later, today registered the market effect of bullish news that included another supply of pessimistic crop reports and export sale of 10,000,000 bushels of Canadian grain to Europe.

Grain traders said the market's failure to respnod more strongly to these developments was due partly to persistent hedging sales in connection with marketing of grain that has been under loan.

Wheat closed ¼ to ¾ cent higher than Saturday, May 1.04⅞@1.05; July 1.03¾@1.03⅞; corn unchanged to ¼ cent up, May 56¾@56⅝, July 57⅞@57¾; oats unchanged to ⅛ cent up; rye ⅝ to ⅝ cent higher and lard unchanged to 3 cents lower.

Wool Piece Goods Business Is Slow

New York, April 1.— Although men's wear lines for the fall season are now being shown, actual business on wool piece goods during the past week was small, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange Service. Buyers were watching fluctuations in wool and tops markets and proceeding cautiously.

"Most clothing manufacturers were following the trend of retail sales and it was asserted in a number of quarters that April retail business will influence plans for the fall season much more so than in any recent year," says the Exchange Service. "If retail sales next month fall below expectations, manufacturers will probably begin operating on a hand-to-mouth basis."

Rangers, Leafs Open Series Tonight

Stanley Cup At Stake in Seven Games

New York Favored But Toronto Will Be Strengthened By Return of Apps

By the Associated Press

New York, April 1.—New York's streamlined Rangers and Toronto's Maple Leafs open the final series of the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup playoffs tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden with the Rangers favored to take the trophy they last won in 1933.

The Rangers have been installed favorites not only because of their brilliant six-game conquest of the Boston Bruins, but because during the regular season they established a definite superiority over the Leafs. In eight clashes, the Rangers won four, tied three and lost one and rolled a total of 19 goals to 7 for the Canadian sextet.

The Leafs, however, have been strengthened by the return of Syl Apps. He suffered a cracked collar bone midway of the campaign but returned in time to lead the Toronto Club to straight game victories over the Chicago Blackhawks and Detroit Redwings in the playoffs.

This series will mark the third time the Rangers and Leafs have clashed for the Stanley Cup. In 1932, Toronto won with scores that read more like a tennis match, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4. A year later the Rangers triumphed in four games, 5-1, 3-1, 2-3 and 1-0.

The second game also will be played on the Garden ice, Wednesday with the remainder of the best 4-out-of-7 series scheduled for the Toronto rink.

is completely blocked by trees and the golfer hit one that went all the way over the green and back into the woods. When he finally reached the green and putted out his score reached the double figures.

The hole is a gradual incline from tee to green. Trees border the fairway right and left, plus a pair of traps that swallow a wild drive. You can see the flag from the second shot but not the flat of the green, and thus causing frequent over and under clubbing.

To the right of the green, the bank breaks sharply into woods, while on the left a half-dozen miniature traps play havoc with a pulled shot. The traps are in a row and if you're not careful you'll visit more than one before finally reaching the green.

Over the carpet, a trap catches a ball some 4 or 5 feet down the hill, but the trap is flat and if the ball has any speed at all it will roll all the way down to the fourth fairway and leave what could be termed an impossible shot back to the pin, unless lady luck is really with you.

It would be hard to dobut Dave Thompson's word for anything pertaining to Washington Golf and Country Club. For the Scotch professional has played the layout day in and day out for the past 20 years, and you'd better not bet him on 71 or 72 each time out, as Dave would wind up with your bankroll.

But he claims he still hasn't quite mastered the sixth hole. Although the green is open in front for a chip shot if you fall short, Dave finds the real trouble on either side of the green, and over, more than on any other hole of the course.

To walk over and look at the hole, it looks difficult, but no more so than several others on the hilly course. But to play it, it's another story according to Dave, who claims it is the most troublesome on the course.

where the fence is 380 feet distant. The ball dropped into the parked automobiles beyond.

A couple of hundred of the Sanford citizenry saw the Nats shellack four native pitchers for 15 hits. The Nats scored runs in gobs when they scored. They packed up three in the fourth, five in the seventh and six in the eighth. Jimmy Bloodworth broke into home run company in the eighth when he lifted a ball far over the leftfield wall with Walker on base.

As a compliment to the Sanford fans, Manager Bucky Harris permitted Rookie Jim Dean to go to the mound for the last three innings despite the fact he had only two days' rest. It was no test for Dean, who merely lobbed the ball up to the plate, but escaped damage. He allowed two hits, on a triple.

Ken Chase turned in a shutout job for six innings, but he was troubled with wildness and twice the Nats' infield was forced to cut off runs at the plate.

Harvard Defeats North Carolina, 6-5

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 1 (AP).—Rallying in the late innings, Harvard's varsity baseball team pushed across two runs in the ninth inning to edge out a 6 to 5 decision over North Carolina today.

the day preceding the Maryland Open at Columbia. All pros will play with three partners, excepting the Grosner.

Additional tournaments may be added to the schedule, including one the day before the Old Point Comfort event. Al Houghton attempted to set a definite date for the District Open championship at Beaver Dam, but decided to wait until fall. Baltimore pros will be invited to participate.

Houghton and Fraser divided second money in the pro-sweeps with rounds of 74, both playing the nines in 37-37, 74. George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, and John Flattery, Rodgers Forge, were second in the best ball play with a 72, two shots out of the money.

Locomotive Runs Out of Coal, Reds Start 'Thumbing'

Charleston, S. C., April 1 (AP).—'Twas no April fool's joke either—night, and the antics of Hurdman, who was floored by a terrific right hand in the third round, delighted one and all. Hurdman bounced up from the floor for no count after the knockdown and the remainder of the fight kept Padlo on the receiving end of a flicking left and a right he brought up from the canvas.

Five players "thumbed" a truck ride into town while their mates awaited a new engine.

In the eighth round Padlo hit Hurdman on the jaw with a left that bounced the Canadian's mouthpiece out. Nonchalantly, Hurdman backed off, held Padlo away with a right and retrieved the fallen protective device. He appeared certain to be Padlo's third knockout victim in the first round, but he stayed away until Mayon tired and then moved in. The decision was a split verdict. It could have been called a draw. Padlo weighed 148½, Hurdman 149½.

The old darling of the Riding and Hunt Club days, Carl (Red) Guggino polished off a tattoed gentleman identified as Calvin Calp, of Baltimore, in just 2 minutes 30 seconds of the third round of their scheduled eight rounder.

In the opening four-rounder, Elwood Harris 136½, of Richmond, outpointed Phil Ensenga, 137½, of Baltimore.

CornellNetmen Swamp A. U.

Local collegiate tennis warfare was launched on an ominous note yesterday as a powerful band of Cornell netmen whitewashed American University, 9 to 0, at the Columbia Country Club.

To say that any one factor was decisive in Cornell's rout would be an understatement, as the victors excelled in every department of play—on the baseline, at the net and other places where they were put to test for victory.

How helpless was American before Cornell's onslaught may be ascertained from the fact that only in two singles matches was American able to win as many as three games as the Ithacans captured every set.

A. U. holds one tennis victory to its credit this season, a 5-to-4 triumph over Catawba in Salisbury, N. C.

Singles

Ken Randall (Cornell), defeated Bud Fausold, 6—3, 6—1; Bill Gifford (Cornell), defeated Harold Landsman, 6—1, 6—3; Bud Boochever defeated Ernie Webb, 6—1, 6—0; Jerry Lieberthal (Cornell), defeated Ernie McCarthy, 6—0, 6—0; Howard Dye (Cornell), defeated Latimer Evans, 6—2, 6—1; Bob Schwartzman (Cornell), defeated Harry Nielsen, 6—3, 6—0.

Doubles

Dye and Lieberthal defeated Dick Bond and Evans, 6—1, 6—1; Randall and Gifford defeated Fausold and Landsman, 6—3, 6—3; Boochever and Jack Mieday defeated Webb and Nielsen, 6—2, 6—2.

Duke Freshman Tops North-South Amateur

Pinehurst, N. C., April 1 (AP).—Grover Poole, jr., 17-year-old Duke University freshman from Raleigh, N. C., led a field of 164 qualifiers today in the fortieth renewal of the North and South Amateur Golf championship. Poole beat par by four strokes with 33, 35—68.

George T. Dunlap, jr., Pinehurst's favorite son, qualified with 75, and Frank Strafaci, of Brooklyn, the defending champion, had a 76.

H. S. Malik, an Indian prince who plays in a high white turban, distinctive of his caste, and with a full beard, qualified at 79.

terback, the fleet Brostek and Moutenot at halfbacks and the hard-hitting Sant'Ambrogio at fullback is indeed formidable. But here as in the case of the line Bergman will be sorely in need of capable reserves.

Reserves also will be Jack Hagerty's main concern as he whips together his Georgetown eleven. The graduation of Francis Daly, a crack end, plus the unexpected departure from school of Bob Kercher, an All-District choice in 1937-38, may leave the Hoyas short of good wingman. However, on hand will be flankers of the caliber of Mike Kopcik, Al Lujack, John Lascari from last year's varsity plus a pair of promising freshman candidates, Chris Pavich and Dave Wiley.

Another position which may need bolstering is tackle. Here, as at end, the Hoyas have been weakened by an unexpected loss. Big Ed Kowalski, who won a berth on The Post All-District team last year, left school together with Kercher.

Standout of the slim group of tackles for next year will be the demon shot-put thrower, Al Blozis, who at the end of last season was so impressive he was tagged for 1940 All-America recognition. Proved stars, too, are Bill Nealon and Earl Fullilove. After this trio, however, Hagerty doesn't know what to expect. Frank Fenwick, a sophomore, and Dominic Montanero, a junior, showed sporadic flashes of ability last season but both were inconsistent.

On the pleasant side of the picture for Georgetown is the presence of Jim Reichey and Al Matuza, a pair of centers any team would welcome; a strong group of guards headed by All-Eastern Augie Lio and Joe Mickey and a bevy of fine backs, including Jules Koshlap, Joe McFadden, Ben Bulvin, Jim Castiglia, Lou Ghecas and Jack Spencer.

more runs had crossed the plate. Johnny Hutchings, his successor, fared but little better, being nipped for a run in the third and a trio of doubles good for three tallies in the fourth.

Held to two hits through five frames, the National League champs eked out two runs in the sixth on a walk, Frank McCormick's double and Harry Craft's single, and added four more in the seventh by twice filling the bases.

Bridges Wins for Tigers

Lakeland, Fla., April 1.—Tommy Bridges displayed midseason form today, yielding only five hits in eight innings, as the Detroit Tigers banged out a 5-to-3 grapefruit league victory over Indianapolis.

Only 19 batsmen faced Bridges in the first six innings, but he tired in the seventh and eighth to let the Indians score three runs. The Tigers, meanwhile pounded Mike Balas and Gene Hinrichs for ten hits, including home runs by Frank Secory and Pinky Higgins.

Cardinals Beaten

Hollywood, Fla., April 1.—The St. Louis Cardinals dropped a 2-to-1 decision to Columbus of the American Association here today after rallying to tie the count in the first half of the ninth inning.

Lynn Myers drove in the winning run with a single after two were down.

The minor leaguers outhit the Redbirds, 8 to 7, with Preacher Roe, Red Barrett and Tom Sunkel twirling impressively. The Cards made three fielding bobbles.

and Frank Burroughs, Washington.

All the men at both lodges made catches, but nothing to compare with a 22-inch brown trout captured by a Hagerstown man whose name was not learned, or a 16-incher pulled in by Paul Sumners, jr., of Washington.

Fred Healey, of Washington, arrested by Phebus on a charge of fishing with a resident license, was fined $10 and costs by Justice W. J. Stone, of Thurmont. He was fishing in Big Hunting Creek.

Possibly the largest turnout of anglers was at mountain streams in Frederick County, but throughout the State sportsmen hurried off to their favorite spots, to try in the opening the casting technique practiced at home during the winter.

Mountain streams here were clear despite recent rains, but meadow streams were "a little cloudy," said Frank L. Bentz, of the State Game and Inland Fish Commission.

Trout fishing is permitted from 5:30 a. m. to 8 p. m. daily until the season ends June 30. In the Federally owned Catoctin region in Frederick County, the hours are from 7:30 a. m. to 7:30 p. m. in April, and 7 a. m. to 8 p. m. in May and June.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Listen! with Slocum

In the days when the International Correspondence School handed down the epic decision that my high school credits were a trifle short of its rigid entrance standards I got myself a job on the New York American absolutely unaided except by my father.

A veteran scribe, who knew me when I was a baby, and seemed surprised that in 20 some years I had grown up, gave me a great bit of advice about newspaper work. He said "The first rule of good writing is to get paid for it—preferably in advance."

The infant radio industry seems to have added something to that hoary bromide. For it seems if newspapermen will read what they write, and read it clearly and occasionally intelligently, they can make lots of money.

This little mess over in Europe is responsible for much of this newspapermen-in-radio trend, because the broadcasting executives found that a man who could get lyrical about soapsuds, was often a little dull when he explained the delicate wanderings of Hitler's brain.

If you will listen to WJSV (and I trust you will) you can hear lots of veterans of the newspaper industry discussing this and that. For instance there is Elmer Davis, our own Albert Warner in Washington, Linton Wells, H. V. Kaltenborn, William Shirer, from Berlin, Tom Grandin, from Paris, William L. White from any part of Northern Europe; Cecil Brown, from Rome; and many others.

The trained newshawk brings many advantages to radio and a few disadvantages. His greatest problem is reversing the standard newspaper technique of saying as much as possible in the first paragraph or "lead" as Cary Grant, Igor Cassini and us other news folk like to call it.

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

Archie Goodwin was getting good at finding people and his latest success was locating Carla Lovchen in Nat Driscoll's office. She was the friend of Neya Tormic, Wolfe's client, and Wolfe wanted returned to her the paper which she had hidden in one of his books. Wolfe was trying to straighten out the mystery of the murders of Percy Ludlow at the studio where the girls taught fencing, and of Rudolph Faber in their apartment. With the police watching the Maidstone Building where they had followed Carla, Archie's next problem was to get her to Wolfe's unrecognized.

Chapter 28

"HE DIDN'T leave at all. He had some lunch brought in on account of Miss Lovchen."

"She got here at 11:20."

"Yes." The secretary was getting no warmer. "How did you know that? How did you know she was here?"

"Intuition. I'm an intuitive genius." I shifted to Driscoll. "So you didn't kill Faber, huh?"

He stammered, "You mean . . . you must mean Ludlow——"

"I mean Rudolph Faber. A little before noon today he was found in the apartment occupied by Neya Tormic and Carla Lovchen, lying on the floor dead. Stabbed. Miss Tormic and I went there looking for Miss Lovchen, and found him."

The secretary looked impressed. Driscoll's eyes widened and his mouth stood open. I snapped at Carla:

"He was there when you went there. Either alive or dead, or alive and then dead."

"I didn't—I wasn't there——"

"Can it. What do you think this is, hide and seek? They were tailing you. You went in there at 11:05 and came out agin at 11:15. Faber was there."

She shivered again. "I didn't kill him."

"Was he there?"

She shook her head and took a deep jerky breath. "I'm not . . . going to say anything. I am going away, away from America." She clasped her hands at me. "Pliz you must help me! Mr. Driscoll would help me! Oh you must, you must——"

Driscoll demanded in an improved voice, "You say Faber was there in her apartment stabbed to death?"

"Yes."

"And she had just been there?"

"She left there about 30 minutes before the body was found."

He stared at her. The secretary was staring at her too.

I said briskly, "She says she didn't do it. I don't know. The immediate point is that Nero Wolfe wants to see her before the cops get hold of her. What were you going to do, help her get away?"

Driscoll nodded. Then he shook his head. "I don't know. She didn't tell me about Faber. She said . . ." He flung out his hands. "She appealed to me! She swore she had nothing to do with—Ludlow—but she didn't need to! She has been fine with me down there—that fencing—greatest pleasure I ever had in my life—she has been fine and understanding! She is a very fine young woman! I would be proud to have her for a sister and I've told her so! Or daughter! Daughter would be better! She came here and appealed to me to help her get away from trouble, and I was doing it, and I didn't consult any lawyer either! And I'll still do it! Do you realize that she appealed to me? I don't care if her apartment was as full of dead bodies as the morgue, that young woman is no murderer!"

"I UNDERSTAND," said the secretary with ice still in her voice box, "that it is perfectly legal to help anyone go anywhere they want to, provided they have not committed a crime."

"I don't give a darn," Driscoll declared, "whether it's legal or not!"

"Okay." I pushed a palm at him. "Don't yell so loud. The point——"

"I want you to understand—"

"Pipe down! I understand everything. You're a hero. Skip it. Here's the way it stands. You can't go ahead and send her on a world cruise, because to begin with you don't stand a chance of getting her out of here and away, and to end with I won't let you. Nero Wolfe wants to see her. Whatever Nero Wolfe wants he gets or he has a tantrum and I get fired. I have no idea whether she's a very fine young woman or a murderer or what, but I do know that the next thing on her program is a talk with Nero Wolfe, and I'm in charge of the program."

"I suppose," said the secretary crushingly, "that you stand a chance of getting her out of here."

"Chance is right," I agreed grimly. "May I use your phone?"

She pushed it across the desk and I asked the anteroom employe to get me a number. In a moment I had the connection.

"Hello, Hotel Alexander? Let me talk to Ernie Flint. The house detective."

In two minutes I had him.

"Hello, Ernie? Archie Goodwin. That's right. How's about things? Fine, thanks, everything rosy, I'm studying to be a detective. Not on your life. Say, listen, I'm pulling a stunt and I want you to do me a favor. Send a bellboy in uniform over to the Maidstone Building, Room 3259. Wait, get this. A small one, about 5 foot 3, and not a fat one. With a cap on, don't forget the cap. With a dark complexion if you've got one like that. Yep, dark hair and eyes. Good. Have him bring a parcel with him containing all his own clothes, everything, including hat. Right. Oh, not long. He can be back there within an hour, only you'll have to give him another uniform. Oh, no. Just a stunt I'm pulling. I'm playing a trick on a feller. I'll describe it when I see you. Make it snappy, will you, Ernie?"

I rang off, took the expense roll from my pocket, peeled off a ten, and tendered it to the secretary. "Here, run down to the nearest store and get a pair of black low-heeled oxfords that will fit her. Like what a bellboy might wear. Step on it."

She looked critically at Carla's feet. "Five?"

Carla nodded. Driscoll told the secretary:

"Give him back that money." He got out his wallet and produced a $20 bill. "Here. Get a good pair."

SHE TOOK it, handed me mine, and went. She may have been chilly, but she wasn't a goof.

Carla said, "I won't go."

"Oh." I looked at her. "You won't?"

"No."

"Would you rather go to police headquarters and entertain the homicide squad?"

"I won't—I want to go away. I must go away. Mr. Driscoll said he would help me."

"Yeah, well, he wasn't quick enough on his feet. Even after all his fencing lessons. Anyway, you would have been nabbed downstairs. Do you realize at all the kind of spot you're inhabiting right now?"

"I realize—" She stopped to make her voice work. "I'm in a terrible fix. Oh—terrible! You don't know how terrible!"

"Wrong again. I do know. Would I be staging a fool stunt like this to get you to Nero Wolfe if I didn't?"

"It won't do any good to take me to Nero Wolfe. I won't talk to him. I won't talk to anybody."

Driscoll went over and stood in front of her. "Look here, Miss Lovchen," he said, "I don't think that's a sensible attitude. If you don't want to talk to the police, I can understand that. You may have a reason that's absolutely commendable. But sooner or later you'll have to talk to somebody, and if you're not careful it will be to a lawyer, and then you are up against it. From what I have heard of this Nero Wolfe . . ."

He was still jabbering away when the phone announced that the bellboy was in the anteroom.

I shooed Driscoll and Carla into Driscoll's room and had the bellboy sent in to me. He looked about right, maybe an inch taller than her, but not too skinny or too husky. He was grinning because he could see it was a good joke. I opened the parcel for him while he took his uniform off, and handed him a couple of dollars and told him:

"Put your clothes on and sit here. It's a nice view from the window. Maybe 20 minutes. A blue-eyed girl will come and tell you when to go. Return to the hotel and they'll give you another uniform to work in. That two bucks was just for your trouble. Here's a finiff if its effect will be to keep your trap entirely closed regarding the fun we're having. Okay?"

He said it was, and sounded believable. I gave him the five-spot, gathered up the uniform and cap and wrapping paper, and went to the other room, shutting him in.
